GANNA'S HUSBAND IN HUB HOSPITAL CASE

H. F. McCORMICK AND WIFE

Chicago millionaire's case of revitalization was under study and his entire vital system examined at Evans Memorial of Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital. He is the husband of Ganna Walska, one time opera singer.

WOMAN'S BODY SEWED IN BURLAP

Bayonne, N. J., May 25 (A.P.).—The body of a young woman partially covered with burlap roughly sewed together today was recovered from the Kill Von Kull, near the docks of the Gulf Refining Co., by John Lynch, a watchman. Police thought a small mark in the woman's breast was a bullet wound.

COOLIDGE READY TO "RETREAT"

Washington, May 25 (A.P.).—Coincident with a new outburst in Congress against the presidential order authorizing Federal employment of State officers in prohibition enforcement, the White House today said the President was ready to modify the proposal if it proved oppressive.

The Usual Fight Saint Paul Said It Tremble, Evolutionists What Is Our Trouble?

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1926, by the Star Company.)

AFTER THE BRITISH strike of the usual thing happens, Labor leaders fight among themselves; politicians fight each other, but not the men within their own camp. They attack the other party. Labor fights labor, and makes it easy for statesmanship and capital, Siamese twins, to run the government.

Cook, leader of the miners, accuses J. H. Thomas, head of the Railway Unions, and MacDonald, formerly Labor Prime Minister, of deserting the mine workers.

This suits British capital and statesmanship, and will postpone the organizing of another general strike.

THE NORTHERN-BAPTIST Convention meeting in Washington today is threatened with a bitter church fight over "modernism," Standard Oil, the Rockefeller millions and the Rev. Dr. Fosdick, who is too modern to suit other clergymen.

MR. ROCKEFELLER is the richest and a most philanthropic Baptist. The Rev. Mr. Fosdick is a reasonable, learned, convincing man. The church is injured by strife. See the first three verses, fourth chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians, especially this verse:

Endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace.

When the good quarrel the heathens—to say nothing of the evolutionists—rejoice.

EVOLUTIONISTS, and all that believe in the monkey descent, should tremble. The "Supreme Kingdom," organized by Mr. Clarke, once acting Imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, will

New York, May 25 (I.N.S.).—After keeping the wheels of justice waiting for an hour today, beautiful Joyce Hawley, the "wine bath" girl, tripped unabashed to the witness stand to reveal the tale of the tub at the Earl Carroll perjury trial.

The pretty showgirl, who, a half dozen witnesses have testified stepped undraped into a bathtub of champagne at Carroll's recent Broadway party, amply posseised herself of the witness chair and crossed her silk-clad ankles.

HUNT FOR BOY WITH MRS. FULLER'S GEMS

Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller's $50,000 emerald and diamond bracelet, lost in front of the Metropolitan Theatre on April 30, is now believed to have been found by a boy ten years old, and school authorities today began questioning small boys in the South End districts in an effort to identify him.

The boy was seen playing with a bright, shiny bracelet in front of the theatre at about the time Mrs. Fuller lost hers. Charles Durant of Common street, a newsboy, who saw the boy, made a belated report of it.

A reward of $1,000 will be Durant's if the smaller boy can be located, for this is the amount offered by Governor Fuller for information leading to the return of the valuable trinket.

Durant casually mentioned what he had seen to a man widely known for his work in the interests of newsboys, and the latter immediate-

MYSTERY GIRL PLAYS PART IN BRIBE PROBE

Several new witnesses testified today before the Suffolk County Grand Jury investigating the alleged conspiracy of policemen and lawyers to extort money from liquor case defendants.

With the appearance of additional witnesses it was reported that a second batch of indictments would be forthcoming, involving "high police officials and possibly court attaches and judges.

District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien refused to divulge the identity of a mysterious girl witness who has testified in connection with the investigation of operation of the alleged conspiracy in the Roxbury district where the probe began as a result of the disclosure that "dummy defendants" were substituted for the real defendants in liquor cases, according to the authorities.

Maslin Regan of Tremont street, Roxbury, alleged proprietor of a restaurant, was at the courthouse today and it was expected that he would submit himself for arraignment on one of the seven indictments returned by the Grand Jury.

Interest extreme attended the gathering of the jury today for, according to report at the courthouse and in police circles, the indictments expected to come are to be far more

200 DEAD AS VOLCANO FLOODS JAP VILLAGES

London, May 25 (I.N.S.).—Two hundred persons have been drowned, 2,000 are missing and hundreds of houses have been obliterated by two eruptions from Mt. Tokachi, in northern Hokkaido, according to a dispatch from Japan.

A fifty-foot wall of water swept down and wiped out hamlets and farms and an entire village.

Hokkaido, more commonly known as Yezo, is an island in the Japanese archipelago, having an area of 30,349 square miles and a population of 1,917,700.

BEAT BOY AND GET $4,000

New York, May 25 (I.N.S.).—Six bandits slugged a messenger boy with a lead pipe today in front of the branch of the Hamilton National Bank on 179th street, near Grand Concourse, the Bronx, and escaped with $4,000 in cash.

The robbers lay in wait in an automobile parked at the curb and when the messenger appeared across from the car, struck him down, seized the satchel and sped away in the machine.

ANGELL TELLS OF SHAW GIFT

Captain J. Harold Angell, who married Lillian Forsaith, former counter girl for Charles N. Shaw, candy king, admitted on the witness stand today that he knew Shaw gave Lillian a fur coat.

Capt. Angell was testifying in the fight of a relative to break the Shaw will, in which the candy king left a large portion of his estate to Mr. and Mrs. Angell.

Other coats were given to Lillian, her husband testified, but they were given her by Mrs. Shaw.

GERMANY PROTESTS ARMING OF NEIGHBORS

Geneva, Switzerland, May 25 (A.P.).—Germany intervened sensationally at today meeting of the Preparatory Disarmament Commission, when Count von Bernstorff, former Ambassador to the United States, made sharp allusion to the fact that Germany's neighbors were not yet disarmed.

He insisted that the measures proposed by France to strengthen the League of Nations covenant, and to speed assistance to any attacked nation, should be based not on present excessive armaments of Europe, but on the reduced scale of armaments which everybody hoped the eventual international conference would bring to the world.

Count Von Bernstorff emphasized that, although Germany is regarded "morally as a member of" the league, she cannot yet have a voice in the League Council.

Hence, the German spokesman said, he wanted to register the opinion now that future disarmament should be of such nature as to prevent any one nation possessing military strength greater than that at the disposal of the League of Nations.

3 FACE SENTENCE FOR MACKINAC DEATHS

Providence, May 25 (A.P.).—Capt. George W. McVay and Chief Engineer John A. Grant, charged with manslaughter, and Agent George G. Kelly of the steamship company, charged as accessory before the fact, all pleaded nolo in Superior Court today to nine indictments in the explosion of the steamer Mackinac's boiler, taking a toll of 55 lives, in Newport harbor August 18.

Judge Walsh continued the cases for one week for sentence, with bail at $15,000, the same as when the defendants pleaded not guilty last October.

The trial opened May 17 and the prosecution was to have gone on with the case today.

Counsel for both sides, after consultation in the judge's chambers, announced themselves pledged to secrecy as to the change of pleas. The defendants left the courtroom smiling, apparently satisfied.

ural courtroom cupped their hands behind their ears. A silence as tight as the cork in a bottle prevailed as the titian-haired Joyce began testifying.

IRVIN COBB ON STAND.

Irvin S. Cobb, noted writer of fiction, was called as a surprise witness at the resumption of the case today.

Cobb, who was a guest at the party, testified that he left the festivities early, "but was told by Carroll before he left that there was going to be a stunt."

Cobb told his story of the party in a conversational tone. He testified he had imbibed what he thought was "near beer" and mineral water at the party.

The witness was asked by Herbert C. Smyth, defense counsel, if he had any knowledge of champagne.

"Formerly, but not so much of late," answered Cobb.

The witness said that the liquid he saw in the bathtub did not resemble champagne in color.

"Do you drink?", the government counsel asked.

"I only drink whiskey and brandy for medicinal purposes, but rarely," the witness replied.

SAW BOTTLES ON STAGE.

Cobb said he had seen the bathtub filled "at least once." He declared he had seen some bottles heaped up on the stage of an appearance "commonly associated with wine bottles." He said the tub was dragged to the middle of the stage just before he left.

Cobb did not say as to whether Miss Hawley bathed in a tub of champagne, as other witnesses have claimed.

"Aren't you one of America's foremost writers?" Cobb was asked, under cross-examination.

"In my own opinion, I am," replied Cobb, and the courtroom crowd laughed.

There was a great crowd present in the courthouse when the trial was resumed.

THAW MAY TESTIFY.

Among those on the outside trying to look in was Harry K. Thaw in person. It was rumored that Harry would be called as a character witness, but the report could not be confirmed.

There was considerable stretching of necks when Dorothy Gordon, once a chorister in Earl Carroll's "Vanities," took the stand.

Dorothy testified she was the owner of the green cloak with which Earl shielded Joyce Hawley from the vulgar gaze while she was removing her garments preparatory to plunging into the tub of champagne, muscatel, ginger ale, cider, or whatever it was.

Q.—Were you at the party in the theatre? A.—Yes, I got there about midnight and stayed until after four.

Q.—Did you see the bathtub?

A.—Yes, about four o'clock it was moved to the centre of the stage. I gave my cloak to a friend, and Mr. Carroll took it and held it in front of Miss Hawley as she got into the tub.

Q.—Did you see her in the tub?

A.—Yes, she was in it about two minutes.

Cross-examined, Dorothy said she sat so far back that she could not see much of the bather.

WIFE REFUSED HIM KEY WEALTHY BROKER SAYS

New York, May 25.—Percy K. Hudson, wealthy stock speculator, speculated in marriage with much less success than he had in the financial market. He took a chance on getting married, his counsel declared in court, with a pre nuptial agreement that he could enter his home "only by his wife's expressed invitation."

He was not even allowed a latchkey, according to Hudson's attorneys fighting a suit for separate support brought by Mrs. Hudson, asking for $36,000 per year.

The Hudson's were married November 15, last. Mrs. Hudson now claims she was deserted four weeks later.

Attorneys for Hudson said his wife bought $60 silk stockings by the gross, in one two-day period paid $519 for 28 pairs of shoes and has jewelry valued at nearly $500,000 which she purchased and charged to Hudson.

Johnson City, Tenn., May 25 (Universal).—The Tennessee Box Company was destroyed by fire. The loss was estimated at $1,000,000.

The Southern Railway lost a dozen freight cars when lumber yards nearby burned.

William H. Loft, president of the box company, said that rebuilding operations are to start at once.

The fire took place exactly forty-eight hours after a $200,000 blaze destroyed the Johnson City Shale Brick Company four blocks away.

Superintendent of Schools Burke agreed to authorize the questioning of the smaller school children at the Abraham Lincoln School on South End, the nearest school to the residence district in which the Metropolitan Theatre is located, and also other schools in the same general locality.

Headmaster Swan of the Abraham Lincoln School was asked by Superintendent Burke to assume charge of the industry. It is believed that if a boy of ten found the bracelet he did not know of its great value and for that reason did not report it.

sensational than the seven already returned.

Connivance of police with liquor interests in no less than seven lower court districts of the city and county will be charged, it is said.

With Police Sergeant Michael Hartnett, Patrolmen William H. Long and Stephen Mahoney and Attorney Francis J. Burke, all of Roxbury, already arraigned on indictments, two other men were to appear for arraignment in Superior Court today. The seventh indictment was a "John Doe" indictment. Pleas of not guilty were entered by the four men arraigned.

NEW HUB HOTEL TO ACCOMMODATE 350

Fifteen stories high, and with accommodations for 350 guests, Boston's newest hostelry, the Mayflower Hotel in process of construction at Arlington and Newbury streets, will be an architectural addition to the city.

Facing the Public Gardens, the hotel will be opened formally on April 1, 1927. The building will be 156 feet high and there will be a 40-foot illuminated tower on top. This is the only case where the city has permitted a substantial increase in height above the zoning building restriction.

The new hotel will be operated by the Mayflower Hotel Operating Company. It is owned by the Arlington-Newbury Trust. There will be eight small shops on the ground floor.

WEST NEWTON AUTOIST APPEALS JAIL SENTENCE

Lewiston, Me., May 25.—George H. Jackson of West Newton, Mass., was sentenced to 60 days in jail in Municipal Court for driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. He pleaded not guilty, appealed and gave $600 bonds for his appearance at the June term of the Superior Court.

Injured in Crash

Nashua, N. H., May 25.—Mrs. Charles H. Winter, wife of a New York minister, was injured here when an automobile operated by her husband, who gave his address as West 58th street, New York, crashed into a machine operated by Mrs. Gertrude Dwyer of the Lowell road.

TWO MEN INJURED WHEN AUTO HITS WALL

Westfield, May 25.—Charles Zabecki of No. 129 Wallis street, Holyoke, suffered a compound fracture of the left leg, and Stephen Pulleka of No. 81 High street, Holyoke, was cut about the face when an automobile operated by Zabecki struck a stone wall on the Springfield road.

and said that after he (Angell) was discharged from the Keswick Candy Co.'s employ in 1921 he did a deal of personal work for Shaw, which included driving his car.

Angell denied in his testimony that he had told Amelia Lunardini, manager of the Keswick Candy Company, that he hated Shaw.

Preceding Lillian's husband on the stand was Miss Lucinda Alley of Peterboro street, an old friend of Shaw, who testified that she found Lillian, on one occasion, taking a siesta in Shaw's bed at his Wianno Summer home.

Miss Alley also said she saw some of Lillian's toilet articles in Shaw's bathroom at Wianno.

THREE DEAD IN AUTO CRASHES

Bunker Hill street, Charlestown.

The Robinson boy is at the Haymarket Relief Hospital suffering from a fractured skull. He was struck by an automobile operated by Arthur Crowton, of Baker road, Everett.

Hayes, an automobile body builder, with a place of business in Richardson's garage at No. 467 Brookline avenue, Roxbury, had been obsessed with the fear that he would die suddenly. Three weeks ago a naval lieutenant and friend of Hayes dropped dead in the garage, and a few days later another died suddenly.

At that time Hayes is reported to have said: "Believe me, it will not stop at two. There will be a third and I'm inclined to believe I'll be the next one."

McNiff and Hayes were crushed beneath an overturned machine on the Arlington-Billerica road at Church street, Winchester, when the car failed to make the turn and crashed into a post overturning.

COULDN'T MAKE TURN.

According to the police, Harry S. Saum of No. 71 Brookline avenue, Roxbury, was driving the death car which sped down the state road at high speed and attempted to round the "blinker" signal beacon in the middle of the road at Church street, but swung too wide.

At this point there is a sharp turn to the left toward Billerica with a difficult swing about the flashing beacon. Just beyond is an electric light pole. The car failed to make the turn it careened into the pole, bringing down its occupants clear and overturned burying McNiff and Hayes underneath.

Physicians and police were called out to rescue the two victims, but McNiff was dead when the heavy car was lifted from his body, probably meeting death instantaneously, and Hayes died an hour later in the Winchester hospital. The skulls of both men were crushed.

SAUM ARRESTED.

Saum was arrested charged with drunkenness and driving under the influence of liquor and a more serious charge may be lodged against him when he is arraigned today in the Woburn court.

Thomas Keilleen, No. 877 Huntington avenue, Roxbury, and Peter F. McNiff, a brother of the dead man, were uninjured when thrown clear. Keilleen was charged with drunkenness.

Miss Sippola was killed at West Yarmouth by a machine operated by Gladstone Pillsbury of No. 3 Boston avenue, Somerville.

Anna Moriarty, 50, of No. 191 Shawmut avenue, South End, and Nellie Heanin, dying at the City Hospital, each with a fractured skull, suffered when knocked down by automobiles while crossing the street.

M'CORMICK IN HUB HOSPITAL

So much pleased was the Harvester millionaire, husband of the operatice Ganna Walska, with the re-enlivening results of the treatment, which lasted several days, that he is reported ready to contribute $10,000 toward the beautifying of the grounds about the Evans Memorial building.

McCormick, whose gland operation in Chicago, followed by the divorce of himself and Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick and his subsequent marriage to the Polish prima donna, attracted world-wide attention, came to the hospital early this month. The treatment lasted until May 15 when he left with profuse thanks, it was said, for the attention and treatment received.

ONLY ONE ATTENDANT.

While at Evans Memorial he was attended by one man only, Dr. Allan Winter Rowe, head of the Boston University School of Medicine. Dr. Rowe is a research doctor and Evans Memorial is largely a research institution.

One of the finest institutions of its kind in the world, the memorial hospital is almost exclusively concerned with investigations of endocrine disturbances, or in other words with the internal secretion glands, it was said.

McCormick underwent his first operation in June, 1925. It was performed by Dr. Victor D. Lespinasse and it was reported that the millionaire entertained hopes of living to be one hundred years old, with his youthful energy undiminished for many years, as a result of the transference to his system of the glands of another young and healthy individual.

DRY LAW RULING HITS CABARETS

Chicago, May 25 (Universal).—A Temporary injunction writs were handed down by Federal Judge Adam Cliffe against three fashionable down town cabarets, holding them responsible for liquor found on the premises, even though it be brought in by patrons. Cafe owners have banded together to fight the order.

The cabarets affected by the ruling are Friar's Inn, Al Tearney's Town Club and the Moulic Rouge Cafe.

The cabaret owners point out they have no means of knowing who brings liquor into their restaurants or care and even if a man is found to have a bottle, he may have purchased it at a drug store on a legal prescription. Such interpretation of the Volstead act is confiscatory and therefore unenforceable, it is contended by the owners.

DOCTORS QUIT WATCH ON GENERAL PERSHING

Washington, May 25.—General John J. Pershing has so far recovered his health that he has been discharged from the observation of physicians.

After his return from South America, General Pershing reported to the Walter Reed Hospital here for treatment. Illness caused by high blood pressure and infected teeth is understood to have largely disappeared, and he has improved greatly in appearance.

SHORE COURT FINES HUB FISHERMAN $20

Keene, N. H., May 25.—Court was held on the shore of Long Pond, Nelson, at which time Mark Emery of Boston pleaded guilty to a charge of taking two short trout. He was fined $20 and costs. Emery was arrested by State Fish and Game Warden William J. Callahan on the Nelson Brook in Nelson. Emery wanted to return to Boston Sunday afternoon so they began to search for a justice of the peace. They found William J. Halpin on Long Pond. Mr. Halpin rowed his boat ashore and accepted a plea of guilty from Emery.

ASKS COTTON SEED AND PEANUT PROBE

Washington, May 25.—A resolution asking the tariff commission to investigate production of cotton seed, peanuts and soy beans in this country and abroad was introduced by Senator George of Georgia. The American farmer is producing these commodities against lower foreign production costs without help from the tariff, George said.

AGENT AUTHORIZED TO HOLD TAX HEARINGS

Washington, May 25 (A.P.).—Supervising Internal Revenue agents have been authorized by Commissioner Blair to conduct hearings in the field on assessments of deficiencies against taxpayers, in accordance with terms of the new tax law. Taxpayers will be given a copy of the examiner's report and a statement of the changes proposed when a deficiency assessment is levied, and will have thirty days to reply. If the assessment is found warranted, after review at Washington, the taxpayer will be allowed sixty days to appeal.

KNIGHT SHE DREAMT OF WINS HER HEART

Scion of Famous Hub Family Finds His Fortune in "Home" Bride

Out of the mist of a girl's early dreams the knight of romance came charging, not on the steed of the story-books, but in a brilliant speedster of the gasoline era—then he wooed her, and won her.

The maid—Kathleen Mary Kearney of 13 Ivy street, Boston. The man—C. Grover Flint, scion of the famous Fiske family of Boston and Cambridge, who in 1924 offered himself "for sale" in Boston as a "slave."

It reads like a fairy tale. Flint had inherited a vast fortune from his grandfather, John Fiske, author and historian, through his mother, Maude Fiske Flint, and his father, Grover Flint, Spanish War veteran and colleague of Richard Harding Davis.

SCATTERED THE COIN.

Like the gilded youths of his set, young Flint started out to scatter the coin of the realm in a truly royal manner. In 1923 it was said that he spent over $15,000. At one time he owned fifteen motor cars of American and imported makes.

It was in Atlantic City, at a ball on the Million Dollar Pier, that the youth met Miss Kearney.

She had been born in St. John's, Newfoundland, of Owen M. and Mary Thomas Kearney. Her father, a distinguished barrister, was educated at Oxford University, and was a close friend of a French prince, Henri de Beaume. Prince Henri was godfather to baby Kathleen when she arrived.

VISION OF PRINCE.

The girl was educated at Littledale St. Bride's Academy, in St. John's, and apart from her music and art courses, developed a desire to see the big world. She built all the romantic castles of a budding maiden, always the prince or the knight vaguely in the foreground.

EVOLUTION WAR FOR BOSTON

Born in the South, where the Ku Klux Klan found birth, a new organization, fostered by the same interests, is headed northward to make Massachusetts, and particularly Boston, one of its battle grounds in a nation-wide drive against anti-evolution.

The intent of the former Klansmen was revealed by Charles Francis Potter, executive secretary of the Antioch College, in a brief talk before the Unitarian Laymen's League at Unity House.

E. Y. Clarke, onetime supreme kleagle of the Invisible Empire and its original organizer, is the man named by Mr. Potter as the founder of the new movement, which plans to war on all exponents of the Darwinian theory of evolution.

With the fantastic name of "The Supreme Kingdom," the organizer has picked out twelve States in which to launch its campaign this Summer, Potter said, adding, "I don't know how far they'll get with it, but Massachusetts is one of the States chosen for an intensive campaign."

500 ECONOMY STORES EMPLOYES AT DINNER

Approximately 500 employes and friends of the Economy Grocery Stores Corporation gathered together last night at the American House for the annual dinner of the Economy Benefit Association.

Washington, May 25 (A.P.)—Lieutenant-Commander Richard E. Byrd and his polar exploration party expect to arrive at Dover, Eng., Thursday night, aboard the steamship Chantler, and to remain there five days, says a message received by Secretary Wilbur.

It came from the Chantler by way of England and was picked up by Ralph Venegas, a radio amateur of East Hampton, N. H., and forwarded to the Navy Department.

AUTO THEFT SUSPECT GETS TRIAL DELAYED

James S Green, alias John Green, South Boston, who was arrested by Chief aPtrick McDonnell of Randolph charged with the larceny of an automobile, pleaded not guilty in Quincy District Court today. The case was continued until Friday and Green was held in $1,000. Police allege he is a member of a gang, two of whom were sentenced to a year each in the House of Correction in Quincy District Court yesterday for auto theft.

SEVEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL STRUCK BY AUTO, DIES

Hyannis, May 25.—Seven-year-old Ellen E. Sipsola of West Yarmouth died in Cape Cod Hospital shortly after she was taken there as the result of being struck by an automobile alleged to have been operated by Gladstone Pillsbury of No. 8 number 25,000.

FIRE DAMAGES OLD TOWER

The flames, fanned by a brisk wind, burned about halfway up the tower and destroyed some repair work being done on the structure.

The tower was built about 25 years ago by General Lawrence, and the view from it attracts thousands of tourists in the Summer months.

The Medford fire department under Chief John Qualey extinguished the blaze.

SLEEPING SICKNESS DECIMATES CHURCH

Baltimore, Md., May 25 (A.P.)—Four thousand deaths from an epidemic of sleeping sickness has explained an apparent retardation in the growth of Corisco Presbytery in Africa. An investigation by the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in America, to convene here this week, has disclosed 2,000 deaths of Presbyterian communicants in Elat, which supports the largest Presbyterian Church in the world, and 2,000 more deaths in Corisco outside of Elat. In addition to the 4,000 deaths, 5,000 patients are in the Elat hospitals. The communicants in Corisco Presbytery number 25,000.

ONE OF 8 WHO HELPED KEEP DAD FREE

DOROTHY CLARK
One of a family of eight children of W. T. Clark of Boston, freed in Malden District Court of an auto law violation despite a letter from Registrar Goodwin asking for a jail sentence. Judge Riley, in releasing Clark, said to Clark: "I am doing this for the sake of your children."

GOULDS URGED TO FORGET

"And a little child shall lead them——"

It may be the two little children of Edgar and Mrs. Mary A. Gould who will bring the unhappy pair together after many months of marital woe and legal controversy.

Mrs. Gould is now living under the same roof with her husband at his parents' home, No. 295 Clark road, Brookline, the scene of much family friction for three months. The love that parents bear for their offsprings may smooth out the thorny path over which they have been travelling.

To give them a chance to bring about a reconciliation, Judge McCoole in Norfolk County Probate Court dismissed Gould's petition to revoke a temporary decree awarding custody of three-year-old Gloria and five-year-old David to their mother pending his suit for divorce.

In dismissing the petition the judge urged the pair to get together for the sake of their children.

When the court handed down its decision Gould stepped over to his little daughter and pressed her to his breast, showering kisses upon her little face. The mother stood by weeping.

Mrs. Gould blamed her family troubles on too much "in-laws."

Navy Diver Commended

Washington, May 25 (A.P.).—The Navy Department today commended George M. Chase, chief gunner's mate, on recruiting duty at St. Louis, for ten dives in the Garden City mine caverns in 130 feet of water, to recover bodies from an auto.

HOT WAVE ISN'T COMING—NOW

The hot wave predicted for Greater Boston reached its climax and passed off in an expression of disapproval at amateur forecasters.

"Fair tonight and Wednesday, with not much change in temperature" was the official forecast given out today, with nary a word about sizzling heat.

The outstanding high temperatures in the country, according to Worcester Loveland, are between the Lake region and the eastern slope of the Rockies, and a wall of high barometric pressure stands between them and New England.

The maximum mercury mark of yesterday, 88 above, will, it is expected, be passed before nightfall, but not to such a degree as would classify the temperature as being of Summer intensity.

DISABLED BRITISH SHIP IS TOWED TO AZORES

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—The Emlynian, a British freighter, which lost its propeller yesterday, was towed to Fayal, Azores Islands, today by the Red Star freighter Samland, said cable advices. The Samland went to the Emlynian's rescue after the latter had reported itself in distress.

ALL SONS ARE NOT LIKE THIS

A son, who remained friendly to his father and to his mother and sister, who were estranged, will divide a legacy of $25,000 left to Walter O. Berndes of Humbolt street, Cambridge, by his father, the late Walter Oscar Berndes, found dead of asphyxiation in Omaha last week.

The elder Berndes, a retired business man, filed suit for divorce and a hearing of the case was scheduled for next week.

When young Berndes found his mother and sister had not been mentioned in the will he notified them he would divide the estate equally with them.

PLEDGE $614,000 TO NEWTON HOSPITAL

With pledges and cash contributions amounting to $614,356 in the hands of committees in charge of the Newton Hospital drive for new buildings and equipment, more than one-third of the $1,500,000 required for the projected improvements is assured. The goal of the campaigners is a fund of $1,500,000.

The West Newton team, capained by F. S. Hoyt, has received contributions and pledges amounting to $3,625. More than $550,000 has been reported by the special gifts committee. Ten organizations of Newton have pledged a total of $9,075 to the fund.

NATIONAL FOREST FOR EVERY STATE

Washington, May 25 (A.P.).—A bill proposing establishment of a national forest reserve in each State and providing for a popipipeypp of reforestration was drawn up today by Representative Berger, Socialist, Wisconsin. It would establish a migratory bird refuge in each State.

He said at present the distribution of remaining timber "is unbalanced" and his measure would call a "halt" in the present program of "destruction."

BIG GAINS BY DEMOCRATS FORESEEN

Robinson of Arkansas Says Public is Disgusted by G. O. P. Attitude

By JOSEPH T. ROBINSON

Washington, May 25.—A survey of political conditions in the various States where Senators are to be elected and in the many Congressional districts which may be fairly regarded as "doubtful" indicates that the Democrats will make gains in both House of Congress as a result of the elections next November.

'It appears probable that we will obtain a majority in the Senate, and the prospects seem about equal that we may gain control of the House.

The public disgust at the subservience of the Coolidge administration to selfish interests in conflict with the general welfare is daily gathering volume, and in consequence the fictional character of the President's leadership is being recognized.

QUIZ TWO BOYS IN FREIGHT CAR BLAZE

Portland, Me., May 25.—After an epidemic of fires in railroad box cars, which has caused a loss of about $75,000 in four weeks, police questioned two 17-year-old boys in an attempt to locate the incendiary. Three freight cars were destroyed in the fourth fire within three weeks.

PROBE FIRE IN WHICH 31 ARE OVERCOME

Six Firemen Taken to Hospital in $150,000 Blaze in Framingham

Framingham, May 25.—Chief William Holbrook and fire department officials are investigating the cause of the $150,000 fire in the Park building, Concord street, in which thirty-six firemen were overcome, six so seriously they were taken to the Framingham Hospital.

The blaze started in the basement of the Wellworth Service, a combination bakery, candy shop and restaurant, and was discovered by William McGuiness, chef, who warned twenty-five diners to leave. Shortly after the floor of the restaurant collapsed, nearly burying seven firemen in the debris. A balcony in Garino's music and radio shop, next door, also collapsed.

SOUND GENERAL ALARM.

A general alarm summoned all available fire fighters to the scene and Chief John H. Neary of the Natick department answered a call for help with twenty-five men.

Shortly after his arrival Neary was overcome by ammonia fumes following the explosion of a tank in the refrigerator of Hill's market, as was Lieutenant James E. Hancock of Engine 2, David D. Bird, chief's driver; Joseph S. O'Connell, Combination 1; James O'Donnell, Combination 2, and Michael Gorman, Combination 2. They were taken to the Framingham Hospital, where Hancock and Gorman were found to be temporarily blinded.

Captain Michael Dalton, Hoseman Thomas Robbins and Alfred Otmept were taken to the Union Avenue Hospital.

HOTELS THREATENED.

The St. George Theatre and Kendall Hotel were threatened, but were not damaged. Hot air explosions and the bursting of the ammonia tank attracted thousands to the scene.

Medical Examiner James W. Glass treated twenty-five other firemen at the scene and they returned to work.

The second floor of the building was occupied by McNally Building Company, the Gown Shop, Bon Ton Millinery, South Middlesex Co-Operative Bank and Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Those establishments were damaged by smoke.

DEMANDS PAY FOR TERM IN JAIL CELL

Maine Man Says He Served Time for Another Who Was Free

Bangor, Me., May 25.—Barney Glass "wrapped up" a sweet little piece of trouble for himself when, it is alleged, he persuaded Tony Deak to "take the rap" in a liquor case for which Tony served one year in jail.

Tony is the man who makes the charges against Glass in a suit for damages filed in Penobscot County Superior Court demanding wages for all the time he passed within the prison walls.

Having plenty of time on his hands, the prisoner made out an itemized bill in true bookkeeping style and, after making deductions for money received demands $1,172.50 for his vacation.

Last year Deak was convicted in Bangor Municipal Court in a liquor case growing out of a sheriff's seizure at Barney Glass' cafe in Orono. Deak took the blame for the liquor and was sentenced to pay a fine and costs and six months additional in default of payment of his fine and costs.

Deak alleges that Glass promised to pay him time and a half or double time while he languished in jail in behalf of his employer, and then refused to pay his fine so that he was obliged to stay six months longer.

In his bill Tony sets forth the following figures:

To 11 days' work in June, 1925, at $2.50—$27.50.

To 28 days' work in July, 1925, at $2.50—$70.00.

To 221 days laying in the county jail from July 26, 1925, to March 4, 1926, in accordance with an agreement with you at $5 per day $1,105.

Total $1,202.50.

By cash in money and checks, $30.

Balance due $1,172.50.

A set-off has been filed by Barney Glass claiming $1,000 due him for goods, work and materials, also for money lent, etc.

Pekin.—Upon advices from Paris that the Chinese Legation there has neither cash nor credit and is facing complete bankruptcy, the Foreign Office has sought permission to float a loan of $50,000 through a Paris bank, to prevent the legation from being closed by its creditors.

Paris.—Desirous of achieving a greater celebrity for their culinary works of art, the more exclusive French cooks are now demanding that they be permitted to sign their work, just as a painter autographs his canvasses and a writer the children of his brain.

Budapest.—Impoverished Hungarian aristocrats, feeling the pinch of poverty and the general hard times that have overtaken their class, have turned to the muse for succor and not a few of them are receiving fat sums for writing poems for radical political parties glorifying Socialism and its institutions.

KRIM IN FLIGHT; WILL BE IGNORED, SAYS BRIAND

Paris, May 25 (I.N.S.)—"Abd-El-Krim is in flight and represents nothing," and France will not negotiate peace with him, Premier Briand announced today, following a Cabinet meeting. "We will negotiate with the tribes still revolting." A Cabinet communique predicted an early end to the Moroccan war.

The Cabinet unanimously asked War Minister Painleve to send congratulations to the troops and to the friendly chiefs for the humane and rapid manner in which the operations have been conducted. Abd-el-Krim is reported as having sought an armistice in a letter to the French commander in the field.

POSSE HUNTS ARMED MAN IN MAINE WOODS

Columbus Was Spanish! Prove It for Cash!

Madrid, May 25 (I.N.S.)—The newspaper A. B. C. asserts that Christopher Columbus was a Spaniard and not an Italian, and offers a prize of 50,000 pesetas to anyone who can furnish irrefutable proof that Columbus was a native of Galicia, Spain.

EX-MINISTER CHARGES SPITE

Washington, May 25.—Before the Senate tariff investigating committee, William S. Culbertson, minister to Rumania and former tariff commissioner, said he had been subjected to attack before the committee because he refused to support charges against President Coolidge made in the Senate by Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska.

He said his personal letters and papers were not entered into the public record because he had declined to subscribe to the Norris contention that the President attempted to influence former Commissioner Lewis in his official acts by asking for an undated resignation before appointing him.

KILLED AS TRUCK AND MOTORCYCLE HIT

Portsmouth, N. H., May 25.—One man was killed today when a motorcycle and heavy truck collided at a sharp curve known as Trefethen's Corner.

Milk Makes Vigorous Men

IT IS unfortunate, but a fact, that most men arrive at the age of 35 languid and soggy from the poisons of careless eating. This is not due to the demands of normal appetite but to careless indifference to the fundamentals of nutrition. Intelligence in the selection of food is more important than in the choice of a job or clothing. Take milk with your meals regularly. A quart a day. It will help you keep step in business, add to your capacity to enjoy life and take more strokes off your game than a summer's work on the practice tee.

PLANT EMBARGO ENDS JULY 1

Washington, May 25 (A.P.).—Federal plant quarantine restrictions in New England's "barrier zone," established to prevent the spread of gypsy and brown-tail moths, will be abolished July 1.

The area affected includes the towns of Salisbury, North Canton, Norfolk, Canaan and Cornwall in Connecticut; Berkshire County and the town of Monroe in Massachusetts, and 7,189 square miles in Vermont.

The quarantine was established to prevent the spread of moths to Adirondack and Catskill regions of New York State. The Department of Agriculture said today the areas were practically free from infestation.

BONDSMAN IS ROBBED, SHOT

Chicago, May 25 (A.P.).—Joseph Ginsburg, 45, professional bondsman, kilnaped from in front of his home today, was "taken for a ride," robbed of $600, shot twice and pushed from his abductors' automobile on a deserted road near Lyons. A chest wound may cause his death, surgeons said.

Ginsburg was reticent in answering police who sought a description of his assailants. He would not or could not give any reason for his abduction, and he refused to divulge details of his ride.

Authorities thought it possible Ginsburg might have made enemies through his activities as a bondsman.

NOTED JURIST SHOT TO DEATH

THREE PROBES OF WRECK

Today three investigations are under way to determine responsibility for the blunder which sent "The Owl," crack midnight express of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, crashing into a Lowell-New Bedford freight train at Mansfield, with the loss of one life, and a number of injuries to trainmen and passengers.

One investigation is being made by officials of the railroad, another by the States Public Utilities Commission and the third by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Officials of the railroad assert that at best it was a serious error of judgment to permit the freight to shunt its cars around at Mansfield Junction and cross over the main line at a time when two fast expresses were known to be coming from Boston.

Whether the signals were set against "The Owl" and whether the engineer of "The Owl" saw and obeyed the signals may still remain a question, but railroad men assert the freight should have been held on the north bound track from Providence until both the Boston-New York expresses had passed.

BITTER BAPTIST FIGHT LOOMS

Washington, May 25 (A.P.).—Delegates from all parts of the country assembled today for the Northern Baptist convention, hoping to harmonize conflicting views of fundamentalists and modernists and arrive at a common ground for belief.

This "Common Denominator" was declared by the Rev. J. Whitcomb Brougher of California to be unquestioning belief in and the fearless preaching of the deity of Christ. Fifty per cent of all Baptists were fundamental in their belief, he asserted, but were not organized into a separate group and looked with irritation on the discussions in annual conventions between modernists and fundamentalists.

The remaining fifty per cent, he thought, were divided between extremists on both sides who were determined to carry out their convictions even if they destroyed the harmony of the convention, and a larger group of fundamentalists willing to co-operate in the convention.

The conflict between fundamentalists and modernism probably will reach its climax Wednesday when the executive committee reports an amendment to the by-laws, prohibiting seating delegates of any church which does not practice immersion. Some leaders expect the modernists to make an effort to have the amendment tabled, but if this move fails, to introduce resolutions designed to harmonize the differing views.

U. S. CASH BREAKING UP RUSSIAN GHETTOS

Moscow, May 25 (A.P.).—James N. Rosenberg, of the Jewish Joint Distribution Committee of the United States, after a trip through the Ukrainian and Crimean Jewish colonization areas, said today that American relief was aiding in solution of the baffling ghetto problem by withdrawing Jews from unproductive town pursuits and transferring them to farms.

"The former Russian government," said Mr. Rosenberg, "herded the Jews in ghettos, permitting practically no occupation for them except as small traders or unskilled workers. The Soviet government without discrimination, encourages Jews to settle the land. Already 50,000 have settled over 500,000 acres granted them by the government."

GUNS END TIRE THIEF HUNT

Taken at gunpoint by Winchester police, leading stolen tires into an automobile from a cache off the Winchester-Woburn parkway, John P. Donovan, 28, No. 84 Warren avenue, Roxbury, and Elias Brennan, No. 47 Johnston road, Dorchester, were arraigned in Woburn District Court today.

Chief William R. McIntosh of the Winchester police believes the captives are members of an organized gang of tire thieves which has operated recently in and about Woburn, Winchester and Stoneham.

Discovery of the alleged stolen tire cache was made accidentally by Special Officer Roy Sumner, who stood to Winchester, returning with Chief McIntosh, Sergeants Cassidy and Rogers. When the officers reached the spot two men loading tires into a machine ran in the direction of Woburn.

With guns drawn the officers pursued. The fugitives halted and surrendered.

Eleven tires were found in the car and in the hiding place just off the parkway.

Five new tires, valued at $150, were stolen from the Wakefield Radiator Repair Company, Woburn, three days ago, and police believe they are in the lot recovered.

JAPS REITERATE THEY PLANS NO ARMS PARLEY

Tokyo, May 25 (A.P.).—Charles MacVeagh, American ambassador, called on Baron Shidehara, Foreign Minister, today to discuss the reports from Geneva concerning informal Japanese suggestions for a further naval limitation conference. To Mr. MacVeagh the Foreign Minister repeated the declaration of the Foreign Office, that the reports do not indicate the true intention of the Japanese government, which intends to do its utmost to promote the success of the present meeting of the preparatory disarmament commission at Geneva.

WIDOW OF FIRE CHIEF FIGHTS TO BREAK WILL

Bequeathed only $1,000 in his will, Mrs. Anna F. McSorley, 55-year-old widow of the late Captain Peter F. McSorley of the Cambridge fire department, is fighting to break his will, leaving an estate of $16,000, in Middlesex Probate Court.

The will, leaving the entire estate in equal shares to the sisters of the captain, explained the widow had been provided for through receiving real estate previous to his death, with the understanding that this would be her share. It is estimated this property was valued at about $20,000.

ANCIENTS WILL PARADE JUNE 7

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company will celebrate its 285th anniversary on Monday, June 7. Festivities will begin at the Armory, Faneuil Hall, where luncheon will be served from 11 o'clock until noon. At 12:30 the company will escort Governor Fuller into the commander-in-chief to Old South Church for the annual services.

From Old South, the company will march to the Common, where the drum head election will be held. The ceremony of commissioning newly elected officers will be performed by the Governor.

The company will parade to the Copley-Plaza Hotel for a reception at 6:30 and a banquet at 7 o'clock in the evening.

3,000,000 LOAN ON NEW HOTEL

The Suffolk Savings Bank for Seamen and others of Boston has taken what is believed to be the largest single mortgage ever placed with a Massachusetts savings bank, $3,000,000, on the 700-room hotel to be known as "Parker's & Young's," now being erected for the J. R. Whipple Corporation on the site of the old Parker House.

Young's Hotel will in all probability remain open until the new "Parker's & Young's" is completed, at which time the business of the two old Boston houses will be conducted under one roof.

Steel work on the new hotel is under way. The contract with George A. Fuller Co. calls for completion of the hotel by February 10. The structure will have fourteen stories and will be the highest hotel in New England.

ONE GRABS WIRE; TWO ARE KILLED

Flint, Mich., May 25 (I.N.S.).—Henry R. The American Weekly is a complete magazine printed in newspaper form. It has every feature that a good magazine should have—fiction, articles, news features, fashions, household department—plus the newspaper's distribution and flexibility. Of all the periodicals in the United States, it is the most entertaining, the most modern. And because it is so interesting, so alive, it is read from cover to cover, every week, by more than 14,000,000 people!

The American Weekly is an American institution. Every Sunday morning it goes into 4,725,000 homes as part of the Sunday paper. It is watched for, waited for, eagerly welcomed. It is the first part of the paper turned to, the last to be laid aside. It is as much a part of life in these millions of homes as the morning milk or the movies.

The American Weekly is read closely, attentively, under the most favorable conditions, when people are at leisure and at rest. There are no interruptions or business distractions. It gets complete attention. Its contents are thoroughly digested—and remembered. Its message gets across, and sticks.

The public which reads The American Weekly is a buying public. It has a definite standard of living to maintain, and money to maintain it. It is the great American public whose purchases of shoes, clothing, food products and amusements keep the wheels of industry turning. There is no other magazine that reaches this public so completely, so swiftly, and at such little cost.

¶ The American Weekly has peak distribution in the fourteen American cities having one-fifth of the total manufacturers, three-fourths of the total bank clearings, one-third of the urban population of the United States

What are the chief considerations in buying advertising space? They are very simple and definite. An advertiser wants (1) to reach as many people as possible, (2) of the highest collective buying-power, (3) at the lowest possible cost.

The American Weekly satisfies these three requirements better than any other publication in the world. Let's consider each separately:

(1)—The American Weekly's circulation is 4,725,000 families—greater than the combined circulations of the two next largest weekly publications in America. The census estimates 4.38 persons to the average family, of which 2.94 are of reading age. This means that The American Weekly has more than 14,000,000 potential readers every week!

(2)—The American Weekly has its peak circulation where the buying power is. In the fourteen cities shown on the map, one-fifth of the entire output of manufactures of the country is produced—three-fourths of the total bank clearings of the United States are made up—one-third of the total urban population of the United States is concentrated. That's a territory worth covering!

(3)—The advertising rates of The American Weekly are the lowest, in proportion to circulation, in the world—$8.00 per line, $1.69 milline, $14,500 per page (black and white), $15,000 inside color page, $16,000 back cover in color. That's low cost!

The American Weekly is the only national medium in which the advertiser can use a full newspaper size page in color. It is the only big periodical with maximum circulation in the cities—where tremendous buying power is concentrated, and where thorough merchandising distribution is most easily obtained. It is the most unique medium in the world for getting that ultimate end and aim of all advertising—large and lasting results.

CLUB WOMEN IN MEETING'

Atlantic City, N. J., May 25 (A.P.)—Club women of America tonight will begin a series of 10-day discussions on their work as home builders which, in the opinion of Mrs. John D. Sherman, national president, will enable them to chart safer courses through the surging tides of restlessness.

The American home will be the keynote of the convention discussions and the work and study of all departments have been conducted in that light. Mrs. Sherman regards the gathering as a meeting for the discussion of home building problems in the same manner that clothiers, steel workers and persons in every other profession gather to find a common ground and to share their experience and study.

There was much talk of a determined fight against re-endorsement of the child labor amendment with the State of Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Florida most frequently mentioned as leaders of the opposition. Delegates from the Louisville, Ky., club were planning a campaign against the power of the convention to bind individual clubs in this matter.

The "know your courts" resolution provides for a study of courts in every town by club members who will report on whether judges are dry or wet and the ages and classes of offenders.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Typical Boston First Night Audience Greets Noted Spanish Actress, Raquel Meler

IT WAS A TYPICALLY "First Night" audience of Boston's fashionables that greeted Senorita Raquel Meller at the Colonial and applauded that Spanish artiste to the echo. And for the dainty young woman from Old Castile, the evening was another triumph, accenting her tour through the United States.

FROM THE VERY first number, when La Meller tripped onto the stage wearing an exquisite costume of the Spanish lady of high degree, all white from the graceful mantilla to high-heeled shoe, she held her audience in the hollow of her graceful hand.

A MERRY GROUP nearby had Mr. and Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott and the N. Penrose Hallowells while Mr. and Mrs. F. L. W. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Harris Livermore and Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Weld were members of still other coteries.

MRS. RICHARDSON, always the vivacious and handsomely gowned matron, for La Meller's premiere wore a frock of deep dusky rose combined with white. Mrs. Weld was in tan chiffon and Mrs. Hallowell in a similar golden brown embroidered gown.

DISTINCTIVE IN a simple evening gown of black, Mrs. Harris Livermore draped about her slender shoulders a mantilla-like wrap of taffeta and added to the Spanish effect with elaborately wrought earrings.

VERY SPANISH, too, of the most vivid toreador scarlet, was Mrs. Frederick J. Bradlee a velvet wrap, a lovely adjunct to her evening ensemble, the gown it covered molded of gleaming white satin fringed at the hemline.

MISS MARY LOUISE ALMY
Clever young horsewoman who has recently appeared in the ring with Quansett Farm horses, and as usual, carried home a ribbon or two.

THE PREVAILING Spanish touch was apparent in ever so many gorgeous shawls and high backed combs — Madame or Mademoiselle's wife—Miss Suzanne Dabney's shawl-like evening wrap with its swinging silk fringe was one such effect.

MRS. RICHARD ELY DANIELSON'S costume was of black, a lustreless satin of slender lines, most emphatically becoming to that dark tressed and distinguished matron. Another attractive Bostonian of the ultra set, was Mrs. Richard C. Curtis.

A WRAP OF BLACK velvet heavily embroidered in a gold design and lined with black satin carrying the same gleaming metal touch in its adornment was Mrs. Curtis's costume for the Spanish marvel's first Boston appearance.

BLACK, ALWAYS a striking evening effect, was of first choice it seemed—Mrs. J. D. Cameron Bradley wore it both for gown and wrap, as did also Mrs. John Chipman Gray, and Mrs. Henry Sturgis Grew.

OF GOSSAMER NET and soft crepe was Mrs. Gray's gown, worn with pearls as ornaments, her wrap of velvet. Mrs. Henry Dubois Teele's mandarin coat covered a gown of embroidered net, and Mrs. Joseph D. Leland wore gray.

THE YOUNGER SET was there to applaud Raquel Meller—Miss Frances Weld in rose with embroidered Chinese wrap, and Miss Polly Proctor in a group including Mrs. John R. Proctor, the former in lilac chiffon.

OFFICIALDOM OCCUPIED two boxes, His Excellency the Governor and Mrs. Fuller with a family party sitting just opposite the box which held Mayor Malcolm Nichols and his party. Mrs. Fuller was in green, and Madame Fuller in soft gray.

BUT SARTORIALLY SPEAKING, Senorita Meller in her sequence of costumes ranging through the ravishing elaborateness appropriate to the high born lady of Spain to the simplest of peasant garb, held spellbound the feminine portion, at least, of her audience.

NOTHING COULD HAVE been more pleasing than the first costume in which she appeared—a priceless white mantilla draped over the high Spanish comb, snug bodice and swaying, be-ruffled skirt sweeping the floor with its lacy transparent hem.

EQUALLY FETCHING was the pinkish muslin, also be-ruffled and swaying gracefully as La Meller moved about the stage. This, worn with a wide brimmed garden hat, was infinitely becoming to a beauty of the elusive Dane type, such as La Meller's.

SCARLET ROSES as a song accompaniment, later flung out to the audience, were a vivid color motif to accent the gown's pale rose tint. But whether in the peasant yellow and blue, or wearing the small fringed shawl as only the Spanish woman can, La Meller was always a picture.

A SECOND AUDIENCE, smart and brilliant, greets Raquel Meller this evening, so it is indicated, for interest in the brief Boston appearance of the artiste is phenomenal. Here's is a whirlwind appearance, lasting through but two performances; scarce sufficient to allow Boston's smart set to express its appreciation.

"STAGE DISGUSTING," SAYS MRS. BARRYMORE

Chicago, May 25.—"The modern legitimate stage is disgusting," said Mrs. Lionel Barrymore. "It panders to the most vulgar tastes of the public. I do not blame actors and actresses who stick to the movies when the stage demands them, so patently, to lower themselves. The present trend is coarse. In fact, I prefer the stage to the screen myself, but I may go back into the movies."

Flapper petticoat with matching camisole

When days are warm and life is full of golf and Charleston—what modern miss wants to be hot and hampered by too many clothes?

Who wants to wear a slip and step-in chemise all at once? Or a slip when the two-piece frock skirt has a slip top?

The serious problem of eliminating that extra layer has been brought to our attention. We've solved it with garments specially designed.

Petticoats with elastic at waist—no pulling up when arms are raised—no placket to gape embarrassingly. Hip hems in pongee, white and flesh radium or rayon. $2.

Carrying out the ensemble idea in undies, camisoles may be chosen to match skirts in pongee or radium, with hemstitched top. $1.

GIRL OF 12 IS PREPARED TO ENTER COLLEGE

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—Graduation announcements of a private school have disclosed that twelve-year-old Ellen Beth Benson, daughter of Ann[illegible], magazine writer, not only heads her class, but has fulfilled her college entrance requirements.

Her progress has been watched by psychologists since she acquired a vocabulary of nearly 200 words at the age of sixteen months. She has not been given special instruction, however, nor has she been made an object for educational experiments.

Her teachers and her family say she is a normal, healthy girl. Although preferring her books, she enjoys sports, and prefers the company of girls of her own age to that of her elders.

When only nine she had read Kipling, Shakespeare, Thomas Hardy, A. S. M. Hutchinson and other well known authors, and at five had written several stories and poems of her own.

1200 TO ATTEND CONVENTION OF FORESTERS

Bay State Courts Open 47th Annual Session in Salem Tomorrow

By JAMES WALSH.

Approximately 1,200 delegates, representing 256 courts of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, will assemble in the State Armory, Salem, tomorrow, for the business sessions of the forty-seventh annual convention of that organization. One of the features of the convention will be a reception and ball in the Armory tonight. Many notables will be present. Other features will include an address of welcome by the Mayor of Salem.

F. P. Brennan

The business sessions of the convention will be preceded by a solemn mass in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Hawthorne Boulevard, at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow.

HAS 60,000 MEMBERS.

The Rev. Dr. James H. O'Neil, high court chaplain and rector of the Church of the Sacred Heart, East Boston, will be the celebrant. He will be assisted by the pastor and curates of the Immaculate Conception Church. Father O'Neil also will deliver the opening address at the convention.

John H. O'Hara of Salem, high chief ranger of the organization, will preside at the convention sessions. The Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters is the largest Catholic fraternal insurance organization in Massachusetts.

Probably one of the most interesting reports will be that of High Secretary-Treasurer Joseph J. Forrester. It is expected the report will show that the membership is approximately 60,000, men and women. The Rev. George P. O'Connor, director of the Catholic Charitable Bureau, will deliver an address on the work done under the O'Sullivan-Lawler Delinquent Fund. The Rev. Daniel F. Tully will give a report for the diocese of Springfield.

Thursday has been set aside for entertainment of the delegates who will remain over. Entertainments have been made for an outing at Salem Willows on that day.

COMMITTEE IN CHARGE.

The High Standing Committee as a will officiate at the convention is John H. O'Hara, high chief ranger; Patrick J. McArdle, of Boston, high vice-chief ranger; Joseph J. Forrester of Boston, high secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Mary A. Costello of Boston, high senior conductor; Peter A. Welsh of Boston, high junior conductor; James A. Donovan of Springfield, high inside sentinel; Joseph P. McCabe of Atlantic, high outside sentinel; Fr. O'Neil, Dr. Francis J. Hanley, high medical examiner; Miss Frances M. O'Donnell, assistant high secretary-treasurer, and Judge Joseph A. Sheehan, corporation counsel.

Francis P. Brennan, businessman of Dorchester, is one of the candidates for the office of high outside sentinel at the convention.

Mr. Brennan is a charter member of Edward Everett Court. He served for two years as chief ranger. For ten years he was treasurer of his court. The committee advocating his selection includes Chief Ranger Frank Silva, Vice-Chief Ranger Herbert Williams, Treasurer Henry Walper, Financial Secretary Alfred Shea and Past Chief Rangers John Sinahan, Richard Burchill, Thomas Fitzgerald and James Molineaux.

POLAND FACES DICTATORSHIP

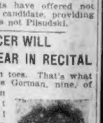
Warsaw, May 25 (I.N.S.)—The Bartel government today issued a proclamation declaring that it will bestow dictatorial powers on the next President of Poland if the Parliament offers any obstacles to his carrying out a reform program.

The government's proclamation is regarded in effect as an ultimatum to the Posen faction.

Marshal Pilsudski, who anticipates being elected President in the elections next week, has announced that he will seek these reforms and will ask for the immediate dissolution of the Parliament.

While the Pilsudski adherents maintain they are certain of electing their candidate, there is still a considerable amount of opposition to him in some parts of the country. The Nationalists have offered not to oppose any candidate, providing this candidate is not Pilsudski.

YOUNG DANCER WILL APPEAR IN RECITAL



As acrobat on toes. That's what "Baby" Florence Gorman, nine, of No. 11 Hodgdon terrace, West Roxbury, will portray when she dances at the Hazel Boone recital in Jordan Hall on June 2. She is one of the talented solo dancers on the recital program.

Florence has been dancing since she was four, and has contributed liberally of her talents to benefits for wounded veterans. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Gorman.

Summer Home Burns

Gloucester, May 25.—Damage estimated at $6,000 was caused by fire to "Finisterre," Eastern Point summer place of John Clay of Chicago. The firemen had a difficult time in extinguishing the blaze.

2 IN HEROIC RESCUES LOSE THEIR LIVES

New York, May 25 (I.N.S.)—Two out of three members of a family which figured in heroic rescues during a tenement fire here yesterday are dead today, and the third, Mrs. Antonio Bessasa, is not expected to live. Her daughter, Lillian, three years old, died less than twelve hours after the son, Robert, two. They were carried from their blazing apartment by a fireman, who had to make dangerous leaps from window to window.

SCOPES BATTLE DUE MONDAY

Washington, May 25 (I.N.S.)—The "Legal Battle of the Century," over Tennessee's anti-evolution law will be resumed Monday before Tennessee's Supreme Court in a second test of the law's constitutionality, it was announced today by Dr. John R. Neal of counsel for John Thomas Scopes, convicted school teacher.

Attorneys for Scopes will argue that his conviction for teaching his Dayton, Tenn., high school classes that man is a mammal, was a denial of his constitutional guarantees of freedom of religion and liberty of thought. The young teacher will be represented by the same brilliant array of counsel, including Clarence Darrow and Arthur Garfield Hays, who defended him at Dayton last Summer.

The State's law, prohibiting the teaching of any theory of evolution which conflicts with the divine story of creation, will be defended by State Attorney-General Frank Thompson, K. T. McClinoc of Nashville, and Edward Seay, Nashville railroad attorney.

20,839 NEW AUTO DRIVERS IN STATE

There are more than 20,000 new operators of automobiles in this State this year, according to the license figures at the Registry of Motor Vehicles, the exact number being 20,839. Up to May 1, there was a total registration of 500,877 pleasure cars, 86,585 commercial cars, and 4,919 motor cycles, bringing the total registration up to 592,381. Last year the total registration was slightly above the 700,000 mark.

The receipts up to May 1, amounted to $9,166,188.75, compared with only $6,442,789.50 for the corresponding period last year.

WOMAN PLEADS GUILTY TO POSSESSING LIQUOR

Brattleboro, Vt., May 25.—Arrested on a charge of possessing intoxicating liquor, Mrs. Catherine Swan, twenty-nine, pleaded guilty in municipal court. Two quarts of alcohol, 86 bottles of home brew, many empty pint bottles, a capping machine and other equipment was found by the raiding officers. Her husband, Charles Swan, escaped.

Alumnae Will Attend Play at the Copley Tomorrow Night

Tomorrow night will be Notre Dame Night at the Copley Theatre. Members of the Roxbury Notre Dame Alumnae Association and their friends will attend the performance of "The Oyster." Through the courtesy of the management of the theatre, a percentage of the house receipts for the evening will be given to the Alumnae Association fund of $2,000 in order that it may receive a gift of a like sum from James J. Phelan, banker, the entire amount will go toward a fund for the erection of a new building for the school gymnasium.

Miss Helen Watson is the general chairman of the committee in charge. Others include Miss Mary Merrigan president of the association, Miss Jane Maynes, vice president; Miss Margaret Swan, secretary; Mrs. John J. Hickey, Mrs. Thomas Green and the Misses Frances McCormick, Ruth McMahon Anna Scollard, Agnes Curry Mildred Manning, Mary Sheeran, Eleanor Mahoney, Gertrude Hughes, Charlotte Perry, Alberta Wheeler, Ruth Keleher, Mary Kennedy, Amie Shields, Marie Ludovic Rosemary Stanford and Marie Curtis.

CAKE BUILDS UP FLESH

The New England Bakers' Association contends cake is really more beneficial and flesh building than the plain loaf of bread.

Dr. H. H. Barnard, president of the American Institute of Baking, addressing the bakers at their fifth annual convention at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, advocated the use of cake at a fourth meal every day to build up flesh.

Two Boys Dodge "Chair"

New York, May 25 (A.P.).—The shadow of the electric chair was lifted today from the youthful heads of John Regan, sixteen, and William Kilbride, fifteen, when Judge Mancuso, on recommendation of the district attorney, reduced murder charges against them to manslaughter.

DRY REFERENDA SOUGHT TO AID CONGRESS

Washington, May 25 (A.P.).—During the discussion that followed publication of the new dry order suggestions that the prohibition issue be disposed of through a referendum have been growing.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, joined the ranks of those favoring such an expression by the voters, saying he thought it "would aid Congress in intelligently disposing of the subject."

His personal opinion was that, in a national referendum, five or six states would return large wet majorities and that the remainder of the country would vote dry.

IN VARIOUS STATES.

New York already has decided upon a State referendum, and a similar canvass is being sought in Pennsylvania and Illinois.

San Francisco City and County Board of Supervisors also has decided to place the issue on the November ballot.

A referendum in Ohio has been proposed by Maurice Maschke, Republican leader, and this probably will be supported by a modification committee of 100 formed at Cleveland, with Benedict Crowell, former Assistant Secretary of War, as temporary chairman.

LEGAL, SAYS SARGENT.

Under fire in Congress and elsewhere on grounds that it is unconstitutional and its purport inadvisable, the executive order authorizing enrollment of State and local police as Federal prohibition agents is held by Attorney-General Sargent to be legal.

Secretary Mellon, meanwhile, has conceded that he would not have recommended promulgation of the order if he had foreseen the controversy it has provoked, but, since it "is doing no harm," he does not plan to urge its revocation.

David I. Walsh for "Dry Law" Enforcement

Worcester, May 25.—Support of President Coolidge's efforts to enforce the dry law through the enlistment of local, State and county officials in the duty of everyone, regardless of party affiliation, according to former Senator David I. Walsh, who declared himself firmly behind the President in his latest move.

Walsh declared he did not know exactly what the President's order specified, as he had not studied it carefully. Neither does he know anything about its constitutionality. The main thing is the order, however, he said, was the desire to bring about a rigid enforcement of the law with which he is heartily in favor.

"Regardless of one's belief in, or sympathy with the purposes of a law," the Senator said, "government—and especially respected government—can only be maintained by law enforcement. The way to change a law is not to break it."

WHITE STAR LINE SALE PROPOSALS RESUMED

London, May 25 (A.P.).—Negotiations for sale of the White Star line by the International Mercantile Marine to a British syndicate interrupted by the recent general strike in Great Britain, were resumed today. It was expected in shipping circles the sale would be completed before the end of June.

FORD'S PAPER IN ATTACK ON 'TRUSTS'

Muscle Shoals Disposal Delay Scored by Dearborn Independent

Detroit, May 25 (Universal).—"Farmer Not Fooled But Funcoed," is the title of the editorial which attacks the attempts of three 'great trusts to destroy the value to the farmer of Muscle Shoals. In Henry Ford's Dearborn Independent for June 5.

The editorial charges that the "Power Trust," the "Aluminum Trust" and the "Chilean Nitrate Combine" have deliberately tried to halt development of Muscle Shoals by entering a bid which will automatically prevent economic production of power and fertilizer.

The editorial in part says: "President Coolidge once said in anticipation of a lower bid than the Ford offer being made

"'While the price is an important element, there is another consideration even more compelling. The agriculture of the nation needs a greater supply and lower cost of fertilizer.'

"Has the President not known that with the higher price offered by the power group for Muscle Shoals power, a greater supply and lower cost of fertilizer is impossible?

"The delay of Congress in making any disposal of Muscle Shoals is an indication that the power combine has put it over on the President and on Congress."

NO COLOR LINE AT HUB 'Y'

New Bedford may draw the color line, but the Boston Y. W. C. A. welcomes girls of the negro race on equality with their white sisters, according to officials of the association.

Negro girls have occupied rooms in the homes established by the Y. W. C. A. in this city and eat in its restaurants and cafeterias.

"The Boston Y. W. C. A.," said Mrs. Charles Todd Wolfe, general secretary, "always has and will continue to treat the negro girls just the same as the white girl or any girl for that matter."

EAST BOSTON BRIDGE BILL PASSES

Act Providing Toll Viaduct or Tunnel Meets but Little Opposition

With but few dissenting votes, the House of Representatives passed to engrossment the bill providing for a privately owned toll bridge or tunnel to connect Boston with East Boston.

Many amendments offered which would make the measure effective only after a submission to a referendum by the voters of Boston; effective after acceptance by the Mayor and City Council and others characterized as hostile to the whole bill, were defeated overwhelmingly.

Only one amendment was added to the bill, this offered by Representative Adlow which struck out the clause making the measure a contract between the State and the company. It was contended that such a provision would make it impossible for the Legislature to change the bill in the future without the consent of the bridge company.

Verbal attacks launched against the chief feature of the proposed link across the harbor made no impression on the legislators.

Under the present measure, it was pointed out by Representative Adlow [illegible] may construct its own bridge or tunnel at any time and that ferry service may always be available to those who prefer to use it.

U. S. REBUFFED IN DRAFT OF DISARMAMENT PLANS

Geneva, May 25 (I.N.S.).—France scores a victory and the United States gets a rebuff in the report of the drafting commission of the League of Nations disarmament preparatory commission.

The drafting commission report approves the French thesis that "disarmament is only realizable in proportion to security."

The report ignores the proposal of the United States that the questions of naval and military disarmament be separated.

HOUSE TAKES UP FEDERAL JUDGES' SALARY BOOST

Washington, May 25 (A P.)—Turning attention to recommendations by its judiciary committee, the House today set out to get action before night adjournment on two Senate bills one proposing many increases for the federal judiciary and the other providing for a new federal district in Texas. Under the first measure the salaries of the district judges would be increased from $7,500 annually to $20,000, while that of the circuit judges of the Supreme Court would be raised from $14,000 to $15,000. Georgia Hale in Cast of "The Great Gatesby"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, May 25 — Right off hand I should say Georgia Hale is a very lucky girl, for she has been summoned to New York to play an important feminine role in "The Great Gatesby." I say lucky because she survived Joseph Von Sternberg's picture, "The Salvation Hunters," and lived to bring great credit upon herself and Charles Chaplin in "The Gold Rush."

JAIL COLLEGE CAMPUS BOOTLEGGER

Fake 'Lord Beaverbrook' Is Bilked by Gamblers

"Do you believe in ghosts?" asked Edith.

HOW THE STORY STARTS

PROFESSOR WILLIAM A. PORTER tells in the introduction to his journal of the strange power of his wife, Jane—a sort of second sight or "vision without eyes." She "sees" Uncle Horace lying dead on the library floor at Twin Hollow's and prophesies a telephone call to this effect which is soon after received. She also "sees" him later marching with his class at college commencement. What this strange power is causes the professor profound study and wonder. Can she lift the veil which hides events from the ordinary human mind? Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER II.

June 18.

I FEEL tonight rather like the man who had caught a bull by the tail and daren't let go. And yet I am certain there is a perfectly natural explanation.

The difficulty is that I cannot very well go to Jane about it. If it is what it appears to be, and not a double exposure, it will frighten her. If it is a double exposure, she will wonder at my inquiry, and think I am watching her.

But certain things are very curious, she thought she saw Uncle Horace marching onto the field with his class. So much did this upset her that, when she stood up to take her picture, the camera shook in her hands. Then she takes the picture, and instead of the eight old men of the class of '70 there were nine.

And she knows it. Why else would she hide the print, and pretend that she had mislaid it? It was that fact which made me suspicious.

So Jane had lost her picture. Jane, whose every act is a marvel of mathematical exactness.

There are nine men in the picture; there is no getting away from it. And there is no denying, either, a faint difference in the ninth figure, a sort of shadowiness, a lack of definition. Under Jane's reading glass it gains nothing. The features, owing to the distance, are indistinct, but if one could examine the ghost of old Horace it is there.

Later: I have shown the picture to Lear, and he says it is undoubtedly a case of double exposure.

"What else could it be?" he said, with that peculiar irritation induced in some people by any suggestion of the supernatural.

"I don't think she ever took a picture of him in her life."

"Well somebody has," he said and handed the print back to me "If you don't believe me, show it to Cameron. He's a shark on that sort of thing."

Note: Cameron, Exchange Professor of Physics, at our University. A member of the Society for Psychical Research, and known, I understand, among the students as "Spooks" Cameron.

But I have not shown it to Cameron, and I do not intend to. I hardly know the man, for one thing. And for another, Lear is right. The University looks with suspicion on the few among the faculty who have on occasion dabbled with such matters.

"Personally " he said, "I think it's a double exposure But whether it is or not I'm darned certain of one thing, the less said about it the better."

June 19.

Curious, when one begins to think on a subject, how it sometimes comes up in the most unexpected places.

I dropped into the dining room for tea this afternoon after Jane's bridge party, to find Jane looking uncomfortable and an animated conversation on spiritualism going on, with Helena Lear leading it

"Ah!" she said when she saw me, "here comes our cynic. I suppose you don't believe in automatic writing either"

"I should," I replied gravely, "I have seen as many as fifty men talk

EXPECTS FARM BILL TO PASS

New York, May 25 (I.N.S.)—More than anything else, the farmer needs to find a solution of his marketing problems to put American agriculture on its feet, Secretary of Agriculture Jardine today told the National Association of Credit Men The hope of the future, Jardine said, lies in the development of orderly marketing, particularly through co-operative marketing of farm products

This problem best can be met, Jardine declared, through the $200,000,000 Tincher bill, which the administration has approved. The measure was withdrawn last week just before the House defeated the $1,500,000 Haugen price stabilization bill, but this has not lessened his hope, Jardine added, that Congress at this session would enact helpful farm legislation.

SEEKS NEW 'DISTRICT' MEASURE

Governor's Action in Opposing Bill Not Yet Passed Surprises Legislators

Senators and Representatives expressed surprise today at Governor Fuller's action in turning both Houses that he would not sign the so-called "redistricting bill" if the measure did not give an "even break" to each of the major political parties.

President Wellington Wells of the Senate and Speaker Hull of the House refused to make any formal statement on the Governor's letter, however, it was the general opinion about the State House that the Governor had given his approval to the statement by Chairman Mellen of the State Democratic Committee that the redistricting plan was the worst gerrymander in years."

In a letter sent to President Wells of the Senate and Speaker Hull of the House, the Governor apologized for interfering in a matter which was not yet reached him for official consideration, and then called for changes in the proposed senatorial districts which include the cities of Lawrence, Lowell, Cambridge, Fall River and Salem.

ASKS REARRANGEMENT.

"I feel that you should rearrange the districts I have enumerated," he said in his letter to the presiding officers, "and any other similar ones your own examination may discover before you present the plan formally for my signature."

The Governor also objects, as stated in his letter, to the fact that while the average number of registered voters per senatorial district is 38,151, the smallest of the districts laid out in the bill before the Legislature—the Cape and Plymouth district—is made up of only 17,249 voters, while the largest—the district including the city of Fall River and the towns of Somerset, Swansea and Westport—has 42,846. The Governor expressed the opinion that the districts should be made of approximate much more uniformly to the average number of 35,151 registered voters.

CITES CERTAIN CASES.

Opposition to the plan adopted by the Legislature has been presented to Governor Fuller at various conferences by prominent Democrats during the past few weeks.

As a result of these conferences, there have been suggestions by Republicans in the Legislature that the city of Lawrence, which under the redistricting plan was divided by taking South Lawrence, a Democratic section, away from the rest of the city, be left intact and combined with the town of Methuen only in a new district.

It was suggested also that the town of Westport be taken out of the proposed district with Fall River and placed in the district with New Bedford, where it has been for the past ten years under the old arrangement

CLEVERNESS AND INTELLIGENCE

WHICH is best, cleverness or intelligence?

Cleverness is a showy attribute, an ornament in the lighter, more material side of life, and of enormous assistance to those who would shine in high success. But one can in all conscience say it usually lacks the clear insight, the comprehensive grasp and noble purpose needed to accomplish what is deeply beneficent to humanity

Cleverness has an immense provision of words at its disposal, words that lure and captivate, but leave no help nor consolation in their wake. The clever man fascinates, whilst he rules, carries you along with him, but when you think back upon what he said you feel unsatisfied. Somehow you have the intuition that it was all clever, self-interest at the back of his fine flow of words. It misses your heart.

You would go to that man for advice in a lawsuit you would side enthralled perhaps as he entertained you, by his talents.

But when in moral trouble, you would instinctively not go to him.

Cleverness always seems to play like an elegant juggling with truth, with sincerity, with the deepest things in life. Intelligence, on the other hand, may belong to the humblest and most unpretentious. It seems to spring rather from the spirit and heart than from the intellect. The intelligent man, to be sure, may talk beyond you, may even confuse you with his knowledge. Yet, nevertheless, you feel in listening to him that you stand upon bedrock and what he gives you is "true coin."

The clever man will consider it all in the day's work to deceive you, to dazzle you with fireworks of words, to make you see black for white, and pat himself on the back for having so gloriously taken you in.

The intelligent man is the understanding man He gives you something that helps you and remains in your heart as well as in your mind Intelligence will stand by you in the hours of life, materially and morally, whilst cleverness will help you to slip through it, to avoid pitfalls, to shine on the platform or in a drawing - room. But it gives you none of the risky, every-day, sympathetic equipment to meet life and people eye-to-eye, and get on with them. The clever man is for your bright hours; the intelligent one satisfies also in sadness or in trouble.

The clever person confuses your judgment with a thousand definitions till you don't know on which side you are standing. The intelligent person reserves his answer, his judgment, until he gives you the right answer quite simply.

I think it is dangerous to be too clever. Intelligence wears better, has in it more of goodness, kindness, love and—safety!

Four Safes Robbed

Newark, N. J., May 25 (A.P.)—Ten yeggmen early today blew their way into four safes in the plant of Emile Snyder, Inc., in South street, and escaped with $7,000 in cash and precious metals and $50,000 worth of non-negotiable securities

24 KILLED ON PICNIC TRAIN

Munich, May 25 (I.N.S.).—Twenty four persons were killed and twenty seven seriously injured today when a train arriving at the Central Station here crashed into a special holiday train, wrecking several coaches filled with picnickers. Many other passengers suffered slight injuries

The accident was caused, it is believed, by a mistake in signals

The engineer of the incoming train, going at a good rate of speed was unable to apply the brakes in time. The locomotive demolished the rear coach, which was telescoped into the coaches ahead.

RUMSELLER AT COLLEGE PUNISHED

Expelled Amherst Student, Unable to Pay a Fine, Gets Four Months

Northampton, May 25 (A.P.).—George Henry Smith of Schnectady, N. Y., who, the police say, was expelled from Amherst College May 14 for bootlegging, went to jail for four months today when he could not pay a fine.

Smith pleaded guilty today to a charge of transporting liquor in Amherst, and was fined $75. He was fined $20 more for driving his racing automobile without a Massachusetts registration.

When fines are not paid they must be worked out in jail at a rate of 6 cents a day. It was said, however, that at the end of four months, if the fines are not paid, Smith would become a "poor debtor" and subject to discharge

Suddenly today the police Smith had been hauled before the campus dean New York state from time to time. A police officer greeted his machine. Smith surrendered but a girl companion escaped. A pint of alcohol was found in the car

HAYES CONSECRATES MAGNIFICENT SHRINE

Lackawanna, N. Y., May 26 (A.P.)

The new shrine of Our Lady of Victory, one of the most magnificent in the country, was consecrated today by more than 200 churchmen, headed by Cardinal Hayes. More than 20,000 persons were expected to view the new marble shrine in the course of the day. This marks the climax of the labors of Monsignor Nelson H. Baker, who for a century has built up the present "city" on Limestone Hill from an impoverished "no man's land." The new shrine is modern with beautiful mosaics and stained glass windows. At the central figure in a group of marble figures is the Virgin Mary, holding the infant Jesus in her arms.

MAKE FOREIGN TRADE SERVICE PERMANENT

Washington May 25 (I.N.S.)—Steps to expand and place on a permanent basis the government's foreign trade service were being taken today by Secretary Hoover, in anticipation of passage by Congress of a bill removing the temporary character of the service.

The new bill provides for establishment in the Department of Commerce of a Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, charged with the task of developing American commerce abroad. Commercial attaches, trade commissioners and assistants would be appointed by the President, subject to confirmation by the Senate. Commercial attaches and assistants would have the same standing but will report to the Department of Commerce

MELLER QUAINT AND SIMPLE IN TRIUMPH

Spanish Star Causes Frenzy of Excitement and Joy in Colonial Program

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

How much of it was genuine art and how much just adroit stage craft may never be satisfactorily explained in the gorgeous ride to personal triumph that carried Raquel Meller into the four corners of the globe.

There was no doubt about the personal conquest of the singing, coquetting senorita, whose num bers on the program reached the prodigious figure of thirteen, with a complete change of costume for each event.

That the sparkling young lady from Spain swept the most expensive audience of the year into a frenzy of excitement and joy may be disposed of with passing mention. That was her objective and she achieved it. Aside from the undoubted talents of the senorita, however, there was an ample measure of good showmanship in her victory. It need not be remarked that her appearance here, as in New York, was accompanied by skilful theatrical manoeuvres, and that her exploitation has marked every step of her way from the moment she left Paris to those of the more provincial regions.

HER TACTICS

Just as the public had been worked into an ecstasy of interest by the publication of the smart comments on Miss Meller herself and her art, so was it upon her audience last night. Her name may have been the open sesame, but the technique, and you were an artist indeed if you did not recognize it, was all her own. Her program as had planned it—to the last number from among the many songs of the various Spanish provinces, all of them, one, it advertised, in what she led an easy and natural step into submission with the title selection, the closing number.

At the moment La Meller was supreme. You may have struggled with the printed program to find reason for her preceding sunset, but now, after having the theatre at its best, twirled around the little finger of an artist whose voice and personality stand an acid test and whose acting is still a matter of dispute by the experts.

DISTRIBUTES VIOLETS.

Resistance was futile, as you discovered when men and and and had reached clutching hands for the violets La Meller sent tossed among those within easy reach. Even staid and solemn critics—men never known to smile—stretched eager hands for the distributed flowers or rushed down the aisle to beg the favor of a violet and a smile.

That was Raquel Meller—simple, quaint and intoxicating.

SIBERIA FILM AT BOSTON

In the picturization of Bartley Campbell's "Siberia," now at the New Boston, the fate of the doomed sufferers of the Siberian salt mines is contrasted with the gay revels of the more fortunate dwellers in the Winter Palace in the days when the Czar had his troubles with the Nihilists.

Alma Rubens is the Tolstoy heroine, and she is called upon to run the gamut from riches to poverty in a story that plumbs the depths of human woe. The horrors of the dreaded exile in Siberia realistically depicted — the hardship of the extreme cold, the bite of the knout and the bitter despair of those who have no hope.

Also in the cast are Edmund Lowe, Lou Telegen, Lilyan Tashman, Tom Santschi and Helena D'Algy. Victor Schertzinger is responsible for the direction.

To complete the program, there is a new Hal Roach comedy, "Lion Key —Son of Burro," and a bill of vaudeville with Gus Edwards' Juvenile Frolic as the featured attraction.

Coming Events.

WILBUR—"The Green Hat." Michael Arlen's stirring drama of a girl in the bright lights. Engagement extended.

PLYMOUTH — "Merry Merry." Musical comedy served in a style that calls for special delicacies. Two mid-week matinees hereafter will be given on Wednesdays.

COPLEY—"The Oyster." A farce, chiefly concerning a slow old boy who decides to make merry.

TREMONT—Douglas Fairbanks in "The Black Pirate." The swish of Long's trusty cutlas is heard all over the theatre.

MAJESTIC—"The Big Parade." Laurence Stallings' personal view of the World War, told with an exciting film.

GAYETY—"Harin' to Go." High stepping burlesque in which honors are equally shared by high tans and pure whites.

REPRESENTS HUB AT NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL

Appointment of Leopold Morse Goulson to represent Boston at the National Farm School conference, June 3 to June 7, in New York, was announced today. The primary object of the conference is to make the profession of scientific agriculture available to city boys and girls through a free three-year course at the National Farm School, Doylestown, Pa. Thirty-five governors and mayors are included in the conference personnel. The conference has been endorsed by President Coolidge and is held under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture.

READS YOUR MIND

Dunninger, mental marvel, at Keith's.

DUNNINGER IS MYSTERY AT KEITH'S

Dunninger amazed several thousand persons at Keith's. The wonderful mind reader asserts that he has no confederates. At any rate he proved his case last night when he passed out strips of paper for men and women to write down their thoughts and ideas and envelopes in which to seal them and retain them.

Then from the stage he told what had been written. He told a man his day's pay to the cent, another the amount of loose change he had in his clothes, and telephone numbers, initial on jewelry ad lib. He mystified every person in the audience. He had a man come to him and drew the exact. He transferred his power to another man so he read what a girl fifty feet away had written. His was a clever entertainment.

Dr. Walter Dill Scott declared that psycho analysis or concentration is a study in its infancy. Vaudeville's most contentious number "The Dance Club" presented by Harry Delmar and Jean Sette Hackett astounded, for eight pretty and beautifully abused girls Irene Griffith, Margie Kelly, Lucy Norris, Helyn Miller, Priscilla Thompson, Helen Bradley, Gladys Miller and Hilda Morgan, assisted by William Downing, and Al Hackett with Edna Charles and Jean Carroll proved by expositions how shapely they are. Every girl looked a winner Hats or June. The numbers pleased. Julia Shankman led the orchestra and the revue was staged by Delmar.

Lydia Barry, just as bright and sparkling as ever, probably better than she was some years ago, the Du Fonts in a study in nonsense with some of the revue girls in the prologue to their sketch, "America's premier piano quartette in Bits of Dream Music, Art Frank and Harriet Towne in the "Hick and the Chick" and the Youngers in wonderful postures are one the bill also.

SOCIETY TURNS OUT FOR CONCERT

Benefit for Physicians' Home Fine Offering of Varied Interest

By MOSES SMITH.

A notable collection of stars in the musical firmament graced the stage of the Boston Opera House at an operatic concert for the benefit of the Physicians' Home, a project apparently deserving, considering the large audience that paid what must have been record prices to hear the concert and support the occasion.

The price, by the way, for orchestra seats, was $12.50 apiece, a figure we cannot remember duplicated at any public concert. Society turned out in force. But a collection of talent that included Albert Spalding, notable violinist, and Frances Alda, Giovanni Martinelli, Florence Easton and Giovanni Martino—all of the Metropolitan Opera Company—was well able to draw such an audience.

It was a concert of varied interest. First there was Miss Porter, a former Boston music student, who has made a successful debut with the Metropolitan. Her singing of Verdi evidence to show that her gracious and dramatic. Her voice has good quality and she already has more than elementary schooling in the art of interpretation. Her solo she sang the aria, "Ah! mon fils," from Meyerbeer's "Prophet" and she joined Mme. Alda and Messrs. Martinelli and Martino in the quartette from Verdi's "Rigoletto."

Mr. Martinelli has a worldwide reputation, but he is rather unfamiliar to Boston music-lovers, except from his phonograph records. He displayed a magnificent voice varying in quality on occasion. His part on the program consisted of a rendition of "Celeste Aida," beautifully sung, the "Rigoletto" number already mentioned, a duet with Miss Alda from "Madame Butterfly," and the trio from "Faust" with Mme. Alda and Mr. Martino.

In addition to the concerted numbers, Madame Alda sang "Semmes Cosi" from Giordano's "Jest." She was in much better voice than when we last heard her.

Mr. Spalding played several selections with his usual musicianship and fine artistry. All of the performers were much applauded by the enthusiastic audience.

FILM OF LAUGHS AT ORPHEUM

"Oh! What a Nurse!" Syd Chaplin's new funniface tickler, is now being shown at Loew's Orpheum. It sets out right at the start to create laughter, and it keeps it up at a breathless pace right to the final fade out.

Chaplin appears as a newspaper reporter who dives from a ferryboat to rescue a girl; he gets picked up by a rum running tug and is forced to join the forces of a booting queen in order to divert suspicion from the real culprit. The result is that in the booting queen's outfit he runs into a mass of hilarious trouble that continues to the end. Peter Ruth Miller is the outstanding luminary in the supporting cast.

The vaudeville bill is headed by Burns and Kissen, who offer a very humorous dialogue called "Stromberry Pie." "The Barber of Jayville," with Mark Adams, Ben Ruben and company, also proves very amusing. Others were the Seven Rainbow Girls, a dancing act with a "galaxy of pretty goddesses"; Hymans and Evans in "The Quakeress," and Elsie Huber, a singing comedienne. Short picture subjects completed the bill.

Continuing Shows

Mary Young will join the Copley Players next week as the guest artist in a presentation of "Dancing Mothers."

"Dearest Enemy," a musical play of Revolutionary days, will come to the Tremont for a summer engagement, starting Monday, June 7th.

Ray Griffith in "Wet Paint" will be the film feature at the Metropolitan for the week beginning Sunday, June 6th.

"PARIS" GIVES RAY DIFFERENT ROLE TO PLAY

Charles Ray and Joan Crawford make an ideal team for motion pictures with their performance in "Paris," as shown at Loew's State.

Ray, who has entertained millions with his rural characterizations, is cast in a different role and is seen as a swaggering dude and man-about-town. Miss Crawford also seems in a fair way to be on the road to stardom, and in all her scenes with Ray, she is most effective. All in all, "Paris" is an excellent entertainment.

Frederic Fradkin, former concert master of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is the feature stage attraction of the week. That he is well remembered by Boston music lovers was evidenced by the reception accorded him on his appearance.

Holland and Barry, with their Argentine Troubadours, came next with an act that had the audience standing for more.

Philip Spitalny conducts the State concert orchestra through the performance's "Soviolen Rhapsody" and the usual short subject screen features complete the program.

LATTER DAY HONEYMOON OFFERED

Couple, Longest Wed In New England, to Get Splendid Trip

The Boston Evening American, in conjunction with Loew's State Theatre, hereby extends to Mr. and Mrs. ..... of No. ..... street, in the city of town of ....., an invitation to be its guests on a trip to Niagara Falls or to Washington, D. C., with all expenses paid.

Who are Mr. and Mrs. .....?

Where do they reside?

Frankly, we do not know; and so we make this appeal to all our readers, to help us in finding them. So serious is our quest, so anxious are we to get in touch with Mr. ..... and his good wife at the earliest possible moment, that an honorarium of Ten Dollars in Gold will be paid to the reader who first brings this invitation to their attention.

Mr. and Mrs. ..... have been married longer than any other couple in New England. We want them to take a "second honeymoon," free of all expense to themselves. Hence the designation of the two famous wedding-tour towns, Niagara Falls and Washington, D. C.

WED THE LONGEST.

Please note that the invitation is not intended for the OLDEST married couple, but for the couple who have been married the longest time in greatest number of years. The Boston Evening American and the management of Loew's State Theatre confidently expect to find and entertain a Darby and Joan who have been together at least 60 years.

We promise them one of the most enjoyable excursions they have had —it is that first honeymoon journey, way back in the Sixties of the last century. They will make the trip in a parlor car. They will stop at the hotel of their choice. Their every want will be supplied if, indeed, it is not anticipated.

JUST THE DATE.

Observe, dear, that our friends are not asked to do a single thing in order to enjoy this June excursion, except to inform us of the date of their marriage—somewhere in New England. The ceremony must have been performed in these New England in order that the record may be available. The couple must be residents of New England because the Boston Evening American is a New England newspaper.

This little "contest," if such it may be called, is intended to call attention to the wonderful motion-picture play, "Early to Wed," which will be shown all next week at Loew's State Theatre.

"Early to Wed," based upon Evelyn Campbell's delightful magazine story, "Splurge," tells the tale of a young couple of today, who by too long in the beginning of their married life and, in consequence, are finally compelled to "light low." Story and play relate, with many a laugh, the truth discovered years ago by Mr. Moeber, that in order to be happy one must live within his income. The featured players are Kathryn Perry, Matt Moore and Zasu Pitts.

It is desirable for many reasons that the end Mrs. ..... be found without delay. They MUST be found within one week. Find them for us, please, make them happy with the gift of a second honeymoon journey, take Ten Dollars in Gold for your trouble, and accept a Loew's State Theatre box for one showing of "Early to Wed."

POLICE CHIEF NOT NOTIFIED OF HEARING

The Saugus Board of Selectmen was all set to deal with the complaint against Chief of Police Roland L. Mansfield, recently made by two of his special policemen, but the Chief failed to appear at the hearing. Later it developed that the clerk of the board had forgotten to notify him. The hearing will be held at the next meeting.

DAWES TO TAKE 'MINUTE MAN' TO HUB

Arranges for Salem Tercentenary Visit Via New B. & M. Flier

Washington, D. C., May 25 — When Vice-President Dawes leaves Chicago for New England on July 5 to participate in the Salem tercentenary celebration he will take with "Minute Man," new crack train of the Boston & Maine railroad, retracing in part the route followed by Rufus Dawes, his ancestor of Revolutionary days.

The Vice-President made the final arrangements for his visit with Vice-President Gerrit Fort of the Boston & Maine.

Leaving Chicago on the "Minute Man" at 5:30 p. m. on July 5 the Vice-President will arrive at the North Station at 7:25 the next evening and will be the guest over night of Daniel G. Wing, chairman of the board of the First National Bank of Boston, with whom he was associated as a banker in Lincoln, Neb., some years ago. The Vice-President will go to Salem Wednesday, July 7.

He indicated that he might spend a few days at some New England Summer resort after the exercises.

PRISON ESCAPES IN NEW JERSEY TO BE PROBED

Trenton, N. J., May 25 (A.P.)—Recent escapes and other scandals at New Jersey State Prison are to be thoroughly investigated by the Board of Control of State Institutions and Agencies and the Board of Prison Managers, Assemblyman ... that a probe will be made, following a conference which ... with prison officials of the Board of Control.

The appeal of Governor ... Smith of New York and the two-thirds rule to be followed in Democratic national convention today received the support of two more prominent Massachusetts Democrats.

The substitution of majority rule for the present method of nominating candidates requiring a representative William A. Fish of Dorchester and City Councilor Thomas H. Green of Charlestown.

Here's what they think of the project of changing

THOMAS H. GREEN, former State Senator and present City Councillor from the Charlestown district: "I am in favor of the abolition of the present system of nominating candidates for President by the two-thirds rule. I believe that the majority rule should be adopted by the Democratic National Convention. I hope that the majority rule will be substituted as soon as possible, for under the present system a small minority can defeat the will of the majority."

WILLIAM A. FISH, representative from the Dorchester district:—A majority vote at a Presidential convention would give an intelligent expression of the wishes of the delegates. It would bring about a condition where the majority party would be more apt to nominate a candidate who would be satisfactory to the people of the country. Any opinion a majority party would feel to prevent such action would lead to its defeat in the following election. Under the present system a small minority can defeat the will of the majority."

Fastest Gun Play Always Upheld Law

This is the second instalment in a series of articles written for exclusive publication in the Boston Evening American, by "Texas" Jack Sullivan, the world's fastest gun shot in which he will give theories and advice of great value to police employes, police and bandits, even in gun play as a protective measure.

By "TEXAS JACK" SULLIVAN

After years of study and research and information from reliable sources I do not hesitate in naming Major Bill Hickok "Wild" Munroe and "Broncho John" Sullivan, two of all fast gun men of the frontier. They were original characters, of the most astonishing type and records of personal nature that have not been equalled.

Many characters of the old West, of bad repute have been glorified as fearless fighters, and a vast majority of the reading public are under the impression that those badmen were really fast with a gun. No one knows them up in authentic records on the subject.

ALL SERVED GOVERNMENT.

I wish to emphasize that each of the famous gunfighters I have named were United States officers in one capacity or another. They were not badmen, but were they were many hunters who went around with one camp to the other killing people. They were the keepers of the peace in the wildest hardest bit of frontier country. In the world I make this point to demonstrate two facts: that honest men were the West's best souls, not the outlaws, and to improve the fact that those men lived to a good old age, whereas the badmen died young and sudden. There's a fine object lesson there. Think it over!

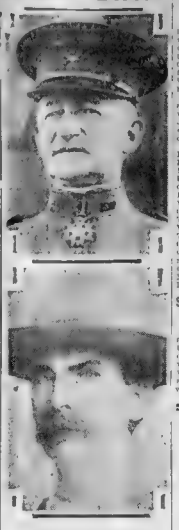
"Wild Bill" Hickok was born on a farm in Northwestern Illinois. His first adventurings were up and down the Mississippi on the old river Packets. For a number of years he was a professional gambler. In those days there was a certain glamor and romantic appeal about the "square" gambler and throughout the Western frontier he was held in high esteem by everybody, for he was often the arbiter of justice and the friend of the unlucky stranger. "Wild Bill" was known as a man of honor and integrity throughout the mining towns and even camps. He is one of the outstanding figures of the tribe fight for law and order that waged for years in the West, and he fought on the side of right and justice. In fact, he became one of the best known and most loved United States marshals in all the West.

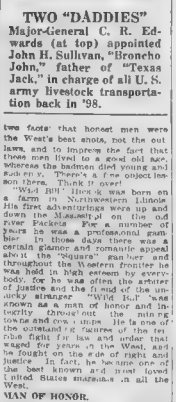
MAN OF HONOR.

"Bat" Masterson was from his first entree into Western affairs a man of impeccable honor and reputation. He also served the United States Government. At the time of his death he was a sporting editor of a New York daily.

"Broncho John" Sullivan, who is still hale and hearty is now retired. In early youth he served as scout and dispatch bearer, and later as U. S. Government agent through the Indian Wars. In 1898 he received appointment from and served under Major General C. R. Edwards in the capacity of Master of Embarkation and Disembarkation of all U. S. Army live stock.

In his next article, which will appear tomorrow, "Texas Jack" will describe "Wild Bill's" fastest and most deadly revolver draw; also the hammer fanning "hip-shot" that made the South Texan cowboy the most feared of gunfighters,—and he "Broncho reverse," the astoundingly fast shot that represents the epitome of surprising speed with a revolver.





TWO "DADDIES"

Major-General C. R. Edwards (at top) appointed John H. Sullivan, "Broncho John," father of "Texas Jack," in charge of all U. S. army livestock transportation back in '98.

EDITOR PLEADS DUTY TO READER

Baltimore, May 25.—Harold Effinton, managing editor of the Baltimore Daily News, places duty to his readers and to his employers over orders of the court.

This he told Justice Eugene O'Dunne in his trial for contempt of court in connection with the taking and publishing of pictures of the Richard Rosen Whittemore murder trial last week.

Mr. Effinton, with Managing Editor Earl B. Deland of the Baltimore American, Harry Clark, city editor of the News, and two photographers were cited after pictures were taken and published in both papers despite the order.

Mr. Effinton ordered the pictures taken "as a matter of duty to readers of the Baltimore News and duty to my employers," he told the court in answer to a question as to why he disregarded the warning.

By questioning, Judge O'Dunne then brought out that the same pictures had been sent to the New York Journal and the International News Reel for distribution.

Dr. Luther to Visit U. S.

Essen, Germany, May 25 (A.P.)—Hans Luther, former chancellor, is making plans for a trip to the United States in June. The trip will be incidental to a tour of the world.

you get this loaf fresh baked

YOU use bread so frequently that you cannot always tell when you are going to run short.

Some mornings you think that you have enough to last all day, then find you must order a new loaf for the evening meal. A friend drops in for tea—or the children come in hungry—and the bread box is quickly emptied!

That is why White Rose Bread is baked and rushed to your grocer not once but twice each day. So that you can get it fragrantly fresh—just a few hours away from the oven—whenever you buy.

Try White Rose Bread today. Notice the difference. Notice its texture—firm and even, like the moist fresh loaves you remember in your childhood. See how much its full, rich flavor adds to each meal.

Your own grocer carries White Rose Bread. It comes to you in a dainty blue and white checked wrapper like a fresh tea towel.

Order a loaf for your very next meal!

HOMER HERCULES SHOWS IN DETAIL HOW HE DOES IT

THE NEW GEORGE H. RUTH POSES FOR THE CAMERA; EXAMINE THESE PICTURES

In these photos, posed especially for the Boston Evening American, the Big Bam demonstrates clearly the salient points of his batting. First, his stance; then the bat swinging level across the plate to get the impact when the momentum is greatest; then the grip, which controls the swing, and, finally, the follow-through. If you will follow these phases through, you will notice how each one produces the maximum power and drive of the Babe's great shoulders and back; how everything is timed and co-ordinated; how no motion or effort is wasted.

FIGHTS I CAN'T FORGET

by TAD — America's Greatest Boxing Authority

When Police Interfered

THIS is the fifty-fifth of a series of famous fights covered by Tad, the greatest sporting cartoonist and leading authority on pugilism in this country

THE cops broke up a great private fight on the afternoon of October 28, 1[illegible] in the ten million per at the foot of Market street, overlooking the East River. Mickey McDonough was to battle Fred Lucas at 10[illegible] pounds and we all met in a dump down on Cherry Hill.

Around the ring were ex-pugilists, the Four Hundred of Cherry Hill, other gents with broken noses, and, quite a few who looked as though they either owned saloons or were good patrons. Some had buns on and kept talking loud, while those who were minus the heat tried to quiet them.

SUDDENLY a big fellow with a broken nose and who looked like an [illegible] Indian chief came in, followed by about eight handlers [illegible] of them. All quit with the necks to see [illegible] the visitors and then came McDonough as serious as a [illegible] He sauntered to his corner, but as soon as his weight rested on the canvas it crashed and he went to the floor in a mass of putty. For his head and then another chair.

Oh, how the wind blew! It hurt do breathe through your nose.

[illegible] rely was a cop in sight. He waded over and [illegible] the crew and began to look for evidence. There in a corner were the gloves and under them of Mickey McDonough.

One fellow stole the clothes as the cop watched those in front, and then another greatest looking young man with two cauliflower ears spoke to him, crooks at [illegible] was going to do with the gloves. Before the cop [illegible] could answer they grabbed him, lifted him over the benches and [illegible] to the rail.

THERE was the river about forty feet below, and it looked cold.

"Yo wid him! Up wid him!" and they had him on the rail pushing [illegible] were some others grabbed his feet and held him [illegible] to get a rope. We'll be him up and pull off the fight, anyhow [illegible]

"No, let's douse him in the river. Come on over wid him now!"

[illegible] and was fighting for his life, kicking, biting and pulling [illegible] He went over into the [illegible] [illegible] the gloves. There was a terrific mix and everybody was [illegible] to hear the splash when about ten other bulls [illegible] and down the dock side [illegible] Lucas [illegible] who made a brave last stand against the mob [illegible] [illegible] lost his helmet, which was floating out to [illegible] the stream.

Suddenly [illegible] thought it would be a grand idea to try to find the [illegible] who fought him. The wide bunch of cops [illegible] [illegible] down the dock to Cherry Hill they hot-footed after the gang. [illegible] with an overcoat and his pants [illegible] with a cop [illegible] and side legs, was a close second, handlers, spectators and [illegible] [illegible] bringing.

The cops went like fire engines with a howling mob behind, but there was no grabbing. The first crowd did the big sneak through side streets and got away. Who got the money? Search me.

Twilight Officials Vote to Bar N. E. League Players

At the weekly meeting of the Twilight League last night it was voted that no New England League players would be allowed to play in the Twilight League unless they first obtained their release.

In addition to this ruling, several changes were made in this week's schedule. A game between Cambridge and Lans was announced for Friday. The Checkers will play at Salem Thursday instead of Somerville playing there; Somerville will play at Lynn Thursday instead of the scheduled Checkerton game.

It's Up to Boston

Boston should make Mathewson Day at Braves Field the brightest spot on a glorious baseball record. Boston fans should turn out to the last one: Boston sport lovers should contribute generously: Boston should make diamond history Friday afternoon.

Matty fulfilled all sport ideals and deserves the full meed of his personal glory. But his day will be for a more wonderful cause than any individual tribute. It will, if Boston responds as Boston should, help countless others down the rocky part of life's trail.

The receipts will start a camp for tubercular veterans at Saranac. There are thousands of boys throughout the country whose lungs were shattered in the gas drenched trenches. Most of them can be saved: the last days of the rest can be made happier. The salvation will be costly.

The dread plague took Matty. It cannot take many of his suffering brothers in arms, if Boston comes through. The great heart that was Matty's urges this appeal. Each fan should buy a ticket. Each sport lover should donate the biggest check he can spare. This is a rapid, hard-boiled age, but the sentiment is still underneath. Boston is known everywhere as the greatest of baseball cities. Boston has a chance to prove it Friday.

NICK FLATLEY.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 25 (A P)— Many of Sydney's [illegible] the A. A. A. handicap [illegible] [illegible] ton, finished first in a three-mile road race here today. Miles [illegible] was second a margin of 3 yards separating the men in first and second places.

The winner was presented with the Marathon championship offered by Nathan Nathanson, a local merchant. The time was rather slow, as the course was in miserable condition for the occasion.

STRIBLING GETS DIPLOMA AFTER WINNING BATTLE

Atlanta, Ga., May 25 (A P)—W [illegible] Stribling, world [illegible] gia boxer, gained both a diploma and a decision bout here last night. He was [illegible] after [illegible] in his match with Ray Neuman, Jersey City, N. J., while the diploma was presented to him by H. [illegible] Wharton, [illegible] of the University of Georgia. Stribling was [illegible] for boys, as the Georgian entered the ring.

JONES WINS BUT GARDNER FALLS IN BRITISH TOURNEY

YANKS HIT BY SEVERE HANDICAP

Defeat of Walker Cup Team Captain Hard Blow to America's Hopes

By ROBERT HARLOW
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Muirfield, Scot., May 25 (I.N.S.)—America's invaders ploughed their way farther into the British amateur golf defenses today.

Bobby Jones, the American champion, entered the second round of the tournament when he defeated R. Omerod of Mid-Surrey, three and two.

The first big setback to the American forces was registered when H. M. Dickson of Glasgow defeated Robert Gardner, captain of the American Walker Cup team, three and two.

Lawrence Lloyd of Greenwich defeated W. MacCallum two up and Grant Peacock of Garden City defeated Jocelyn Beck six and four.

Watts Gunn of Atlanta, Ga., made a splendid start in today's tournament when he defeated F. L. S. Stone two up.

Gunn played eight of the first holes in par, while Stone had five par holes and one birdie.

GARDNER IN POOR FORM.

Jones struck trouble on the short fourth. His ball went into the sand and he had difficulty in getting back to the fairway and finally managed to put up his ball, making the match all square.

Jones won the fifth with a stymie which Omerod was unable to negotiate. On the sixth, a 458-yard hole, Jones had a fine drive and then hooked a full wood, with a following wind, forty yards off the line over a stone wall into the woods and out of bounds. Notwithstanding this, he succeeded in getting a half in six on this par five hole, as Omerod duffed two shots into the rough on the way to the green.

Jones took three putts on the seventh and lost the hole. He won the eighth and ninth when Omerod began to duff more shots. Jones sank his first putt on the ninth.

The tenth hole was halved with Jones clinched his match when he won the eleventh and twelfth and became four up. Omerod lofted his second shot on the eleventh and was twice trapped on the twelfth. Omerod had Jones a dormie on the fifteenth and won the hole. The match was finished when the sixteenth was halved in fours.

VICTOR PLAYS SPOTTY GAME.

Jones, on the whole, played rather spotty golf. He was never in danger, but it was admitted that he will have to steady down if he is to go through to the final.

Tomorrow Jones meets [illegible] Aylmer.

Jones, out 4 4 4 4 5 3 6 4 4—42
Omerod, out 4 5 4 4 4 6 2 5 5—41

The cards for the second nine:

Jones 4 4 4 4 5 3 4 X X—30
Omerod 4 5 5 4 5 4 4 X X—31

Robert Gardner of Chicago, on another part of the course, was playing rather poorly and was 3 down to H. M. Dickson of Glasgow before their match had proceeded very far.

Dickson had Gardner 4 down at the turn. The captain of the American Walker Cup team, during the first nine, displayed his worst brand of golf, and Dickson was taking a 3 on the short fourth as Gardner ran up a 6. At the fifth Gardner missed his drive. At the ninth he again missed his drive, chopped his second shot and put his third out of bounds.

Charles Evans of Chicago has a pay-off match tomorrow when he meets J. B. Beck of London, the winner to play H. D. Gillies.

Watts Gunn of Atlanta makes his debut in a match against F. L. S. Stone.

After being four down at the turn, Gardner attempted a comeback, but found T. Dickson playing steady golf. Gardner won a hole at the eleventh where Dickson overran the green. The next five holes were halved.

Gardner was three down at the seventeenth and as his game was improving he had an excellent chance to save the match, but Dickson left him a perfect stymie with his ball three inches from the cup. While Gardner was three feet away, Gardner courageously lifted a putt and barely missed it, conceding the match to Dickson.

BUDGET PLAN PREVENTS WORRIES

Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

By MARTHA LEE

OF ALL the curses flesh is heir to, financial difficulties are the most [illegible] saddled with them burden of debt, a cloud settles over our entire lives. Not even the smallest expenditure for pleasure can be made without the guilty feeling—"I should have used money for something else!" No matter how hard we struggle—how carefully we scrimp and save—increasing expenses and unexpected events seem bound to push us under, shaking the burden of back bills

There is no surer preventive of financial worries in the world than a carefully planned budget. I know you must begin to think I receive that Budget as a cure for all ills, but if you could read the hundreds of heart breaking letters that come to me each day from people who trace their financial troubles to unnecessary spending, happy letters of the budgeters who are enjoying better living than ever before and watching their bank account grow, all due to certain planned spending—I know you'd be a Budget Booster too.

Once the Budget is made out it is up to you to stick to it. And that will be hard going at first, for the average is strong temptations. You will soon learn to spend by plan, instead of by impulse. I can give you my personal guarantee that Budget will prove an investment, paying rich dividends in pleasure and peace of mind.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I know you will all be interested in the following letter from J. A. B. He writes: "I cannot understand people with a salary of $1[illegible] week getting in debt. I have been married 15 months. Had money enough to furnish a four room flat and pay the expenses of getting married and $10 left. During the year I bought a suit of clothes and a pair of shoes and several shirts and other things. My wife had three dresses, two hats, shoes and other small items, for all of which we paid cash. We now have a baby and paid cash for the doctor's and the hospital. Last week I bought a new carriage for cash and you must agree I paid to know that is right. I earn $30 a week. We do no [illegible] and believe on God either."

Now, Mr. J. A. B. I am sure that you have concealed up your sleeve a budget system, for I know you may not have given it this name, that we all would be interested in knowing about. Congratulations and best wishes for continued prosperity. I will guarantee, Mr. J. A. B. is a pretty fine manager, too! Won't you tell me how you run your family finances? You will help hundreds. I am sure.

[illegible] divide. I am sure.

Mrs. C. T. W. is anxious to the budget system. Husband is a traveling man, paid by month $[illegible] to $42.50 a week. Has to pay his dinners and sometimes suppers on the road. These are the [illegible] monthly expenses: Rent $40, $4.50, electricity $4, coal $7.50, clothes $20, milk $9.50, tea $5, [illegible] $2.75, carpenter bill $[illegible] [illegible] $18.75 [illegible] $1.50 every three months, gas $1.50, [illegible] $25 annually, food $71 a week, laundry $2 weekly. Runs no bill on account. Four in family—two children. Seems impossible to keep head above water. Never getting in debt. Would like to have more than just the common necessities.

A $42.70 budget will allow you say me $4, shelter $9.50, food $12.70 clothing $7, operating $3 and personal $4.50

You see your figures are not in very good proportion. You are paying about $9.20 for rent weekly whereas $7.50 should clothe you and your husband a business can afford. A $4 saving budget should cover the co-operative [illegible] ments and life insurance premiums [illegible] $3 weekly is a great deal to put aside for clothing for four people. Maybe you can spare a little from this allowance, however, to add to your food allotment. You are way out of proportion there, $12.70 should cover all meals taken at [illegible] away from home at [illegible] bill. Here is where your husband can help you. Let him know your budget and [illegible] now from clothing [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Absorbing Story of Life in Boston Today Is Revealed

"SAY," the girl whispered presently, "did I get it straight? The fellow crooked didn't he?"

"Gee," she added when Charlotte nodded. "that's tough for you! You might know a man would do something to get a girl in bad, even if he had to go and die."

She looked up at Charlotte from under the brim of her hat and her black eyes softened

"Say—you weren't in love with him were you?"

Charlotte shuddered

"I hated him."

"The dirty skunk, to go and do a fool stunt like dying, just to get you in trouble. I hate men. Once I was a fool, but I said for it all right. He went away and left me flat. Then I picked up that little rat I married to now. I don't know if I stand for him. I'm women have a notion time don't a

She patted Charlotte's arm encouragingly.

"But never you mind, you'll get off all right. They never do against me a good-looking girl and especially one like you. Anybody can see it's all a mistake. You don't belong here

"I guess my friend will be coming with the bail pretty soon. She's extracted a powder puff from her bag and rubbed it energetically over her face. "She's the manager of a cabaret where I dance. When I get out—and you will, all right—I'll run it from memory in some time and we will laugh about the night we spent in the cooler together. I'm a gypsy Adair. See, here's my card, and the address is on it."

She pulled a bit of paste board to Charlotte who thrust it in the pocket her wra

Sends for Thomas

"You're very kind Charlotte said gravely. "I think they are coming for me now and I am sure you are going to get out of this dreadful place so soon

It isn't so soon at that," the girl laughed, as the figure of the matron again loomed in the corridor "I've been in some 8 cells a

She rose as the guard opened the cell door and gave Charlotte a quick, warm pressure

"So long! Good luck to you Don't worry. Everything is sure to be all right. Just show them your ankles, and smile your prettiest

She went away blithely and it seemed to Charlotte that another friend had passed. Left alone in a cell, Charlotte bent on a murmur prayer that no one to turn to for assistance

This is what Lawrence Hill had finally done to her, she thought with ghastly result of the innocent. His game that she had once thought it to submit to pay

The night passed without Charlotte having closed her eyes

She had been removed from the cell where the other women were and placed in another where she was alone.

When morning came she was still sitting on the only chair her cell boasted

She wiped them away and washed her face and smoothed her hair Then she shared her gown, put fine on a fresh, clean Summer frock which her maid had brought

She looked young and fair, almost a young girl certainly not a maidenless.

There told her that she must leave a lawyer to defend her, for she was to be charged with the murder of Lawrence Hill, Hill, the husband of a man prominent in the Boston legal world

Gregory Thomas!

Yes she thought, she would send for him; he had a brilliant record as a defense lawyer. She had never met him and she wondered if he would come. If he would accept the case of a woman who would have to confess herself to be almost with out funds and friendless.

For surely, she could no longer expect her husband to provide for her. Manning, if he had not already begun action for divorce, as Hill had believed, would certainly do so now. She would then have nothing left, but the house and the car to pay her legal fees

Just before sunset, Gregory Thomas came

His keen, gray eyes catalogued her with a single glance, his firm her hand and sent over it as gallantly as if they were in a drawing room instead of a prison cell

You must forgive me for keeping you waiting so long, Mrs. Manning" he said "but I was busy in court today and just received your message.

She smiled wanly

It was good of you to come at all

Tells Her Story

He was a big man with broad shoulders and strong, virile hands. He gave the impression of extraordinary health and vigor, combined with a capacity of sympathy and complete understanding which was most appealing to poor, tormented Charlotte. She liked him at once, so keen and yet so kind. She felt that she could tell him the whole truth and that he would understand even the bizarre relationship twixt had existed between Hill and herself

"Come, now, Mrs. Manning. Let's have the story. I know it's hard for you and I am deeply sorry, but I feel sure some terrible mistake has been made and we may have a lot of work and trouble before we can clear it up. So help me as much as you can, will you?"

Charlotte began her story of the grisly drama which had ended so tragically in her drawing room the night before

During the weeks Charlotte awaited her trial on the charge of firing the shot that killed Lawrence Hill, Gregory Thomas was her only friend. The relationship between client and legal counsel had deepened quickly into that of friendship after the first interview when she had told him the story of the tragedy—a story which, one had related the court clerk, had kept hundreds breathless in admiration, and of delivery to their ultimate denouement, that she was determined to do should ever know. She would rather have conviction than have all the world laugh and shrug over her pitiful folly.

Thomas, watching her lovely troubled face as she related her story, had read much more than she intended. He guessed the depths of humiliation and hell a human life can know that she was the victim of a well-to-do man posed as a gentleman, one had cared little for the opinion of the world, and had told him in the story of his love for Charlotte, that he was determined to make her his wife at any cost. Charlotte had refused, and he had told him that he was hurting both himself and her, that it was because of that that he had separated from her.

And yet he believed her to be in nocent.

Accustomed as he was in his profession to witness the curious perversions of human nature, he had not met one who had not sinned, she had sinned against

MEDBURY SAYS--

By John P. Medbury

ACCORDING to government reports there are thousands of kleptomaniacs in the United States. A kleptomaniac is an intense man who steals something. . . . But you don't want, sells it for money, he doesn't need in order to buy something he can't use.

ONE fellow [illegible] had kleptomania also wanted to know what [illegible]

THE doctor told him to take anything that wasn't nailed down.

HE was suffering so badly from the disease that he even used to pick his own pockets.

HE had to go around in a bathing suit all the time to keep from robbing himself.

HE didn't dare leave any jewelry on his dresser. It got so that he even had to put mouse traps in the bureau drawers.

HE'D steal money out of one pocket and then when he wasn't looking, he'd hide it in the other.

HE became so crooked that he had to get a policeman to sleep with him at night.

BUT this didn't help much. He finally got so bad that he had to have himself arrested for going through his own waist.

HE went to the circus the other day and tried to cop a couple of elephants.

THE owner of the show said he was tickled to death, that he had the hippopotamus to feed at all times.

EVERY time he visited a circus the manager had to put his pet figures on the wild animals.

IT was nothing for this guy to walk off with a couple of panthers under his coat.

HE'D steal the 20th Century Limited if he could get it off the tracks.

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

One evening last Summer as we were approaching Salisbury beach in our machine, my little girl, upon seeing a Ferris wheel for the first time, exclaimed: "Oh, mama! look at the clothes reel all lit up."

MRS. SMITH,
No. 241 Powell street, Lowell.

DAILY SHORT STORY

BOB O'CONNOR sprawled through the crowded streets violently resentful of the business that had forced him out to catch a train at 7 o'clock in the morning, in the middle of a downpour. The street lamps turned dingy, like Christmas tree candles. The street was so dark that he could see only a few inches ahead of him, and he splashed through puddles of water, sank into mud to his ankles, felt the rain beating against his face and down his collar.

"A nice state I'll be in to handle a big deal tomorrow," he growled.

The station was a dandy-like building, sitting desolately isolated between two rows of track that constituted the town's railway system. As he stumbled up the wooden platform, two Christmas tree candles went out. So did the little glimmer of light at the station.

"Oh, we gods," he groaned. "Now something's happened to the lights."

He groped his way to the station door and opened it. Mingled with the scent of coal gas and toasting leather, he caught a delicate whiff of perfume like a Spring garden. There was a movement in the room.

"Ralph," gasped a girl's voice. "You've come."

The next thing he knew a girl's arms were about him, and a clinging, shuddering young body was held close to his.

"I was so frightened," she whispered, "the rain and the wind and this awful dark place—I just thought I couldn't stand it. I'd have gone home again, but I was afraid I couldn't find my way. It's so dark, Ralph, do you think we're doing right? I suppose it's time to go and the rain and everything, but I've been thinking perhaps we ought to wait—it wouldn't matter, just a few days. It doesn't seem honest running away in the dark like this."

Bob wondered if she wouldn't feel the heat of his blush in the dark. He would frighten her to death if he told her she had hold of the wrong man. He reeled with an much too new as was possible that the station. Ralph would not have stood there like a stick. Cautiously he put out his arms. She snuggled into them like a tired child.

"You're so silent—I'm afraid you're hurt," she murmured. "You're not angry because I wanted to put it off, are you—Ralph, you haven't kissed me."

He felt her arms groping around his neck, her lips fumbled on his face, found his. He couldn't help kissing her. Under the circumstances, it was the only sensible thing to do. But his head was whirling with dismay. How would he ever explain it to her.

She was saying dreamily, "You seem different tonight, somehow. But I like it. I'm not so afraid—now that you've kissed me. That's funny, isn't it. I always felt a little afraid before."

Bob kissed her again. He hadn't meant to. He couldn't have told how it happened. Perhaps he wanted to convince her more strongly that she had nothing to be afraid of.

While these few moments of their meeting passed, the night operator was groping around in his office for a light. He got it at last, finally, but it was so small and dirty that it's light barely suffered for the little space around him.

"Sorry I couldn't scrape up another light for you folks," he called through the window. "But I guess the lights won't be off very long. Something's gone wrong at the plant, I guess."

Bob suddenly became conscious that the garments of the girl in his arms were soaked with rain.

"You're drenched!" he said, alarmed. "You'll catch pneumonia. Come over by the stove."

She stole a light hand over his shoulder, humming a little wordless song. The telephone rang. "Train due in fifteen minutes," the operator said. Only fifteen minutes. He'd have to tell her now. He drew her into his arms and kissed her gently in farewell. At that moment the lights went on.

The girl looked at him blankly for a moment as if not comprehending. You must have half the fire."

They sat close together on the bench, their feet before the big chest iron stove. She snuggled her hand into his, and his closed over it. She would never forgive him for this night's deception, he thought unhappily. Besides, it didn't matter whether she did or not, when she was in love with another man.

An hour before he would have laughed at the idea of falling in love with a girl whose face he had never seen. Could it be possible that a scent of perfume, a sweet vibrant voice, the touch of soft hands and lips could have made such a fool of him? He was violently, absurdly jealous of the man whose place he was taking. He was angry with her for daring to fall in love with someone else. Why hadn't she waited? He must have found her some time.

She didn't seem to mind his silence. She leaned contentedly against his shoulder, humming a little wordless song. The telephone rang. "Train due in fifteen minutes," the operator said. Only fifteen minutes. He'd have to tell her now. He drew her into his arms and kissed her gently in farewell. At that moment the lights went on.

The girl looked at him blankly for a moment as if not comprehending, and then a deep crimson flush ran over her cheeks. She drew away, not violently, but with the shrinking of acute embarrassment. "How—" "No," she murmured, looking away from him. "I don't think I ever cared for him—really. It was just—I wanted life, adventure—" Bob seized her hand. "Do you think you could care for me?"

She flushed, but a smile twitched her lips. "I could have—long ago—if you'd looked at me."

He took a kiss, this time, that was his own.

Someone went stamping into the ticket office. "Heard the news?" he called. "Big post office robbery. They shot the bandit, though, as he was going away with the haul. Lou Brady, that fellow that's wanted in Chicago. He's been living here under the name of Ralph Michaels."

The girl turned white and swayed. Bob caught her and held her close. "That was why—" he murmured. "What an escape you've had."

She hid her pale face against his arm. The night man slammed down the window. "Train's comin'," he announced.

He looked down at the girl. "Guess my business will wait a day or two. I can fit it in with my honeymoon."

Her face remained hidden, but she reached his hand and [illegible]

FOXY GRANDPA AND HIS INTERESTING BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

"YES," said Mr. Joyce, the gentleman at whose home on Long Island we were spending a few days, "I bought him at the dog show in New York. He won the blue ribbon in the puppy class of English sheep dogs and I just couldn't resist him. He was born in a kennel here and has never seen a sheep; but I suppose his ancestors tended many a herd of sheep back in England. He's the best bred puppy of his kind in America."

"May we see him?" asked Bobby.

"I hope so," said Mr. Joyce, "in fact I expect the man to bring him down this afternoon. So if you don't mind we'll wait until he arrives, because I want to be the first to feed him."

Bobby looked rather puzzled at this, and then Mr. Joyce explained.

"Here's something for you to remember, Bobby. If you ever get a new dog, when he arrives you be sure to welcome him yourself and give him the first meal and drink of water. Then he will know he belongs to you and that you are his master. If you are kind to him he will be faithful until he dies."

"I remember that," said Bobby. "What time do you think he will arrive, Mr. Joyce, and what is his name?

"His name is Shepherd Boy the Third, and I think we'll just call him Shep for short. Shep should be here by four o'clock."

Four o'clock came and so did Shep, and as the man who brought him turned him over to Mr. Joyce he wriggled and barked and shook his shaggy grey fur as if he were trying to tell him that he was glad to see him, and that he would try to be a good dog. And after Mr. Joyce had fed and watered him he followed him around as if he had known him all his life.

The next morning we were going for a walk down through the woods and on to a back lane where it really looked like an English countryside where Shep's ancestors might have tended their sheep.

There was no trouble in teaching Shep to follow close behind Mr. Joyce's heels. He seemed to understand it perfectly. If he did scamper away for a short run he ran back quickly to his master and marched along like a veteran.

The lane took us over a bridge and we stood for a moment looking down at the stream which ran under us. As we stood there five or six little lambs which were in the pasture through which the stream ran came leaping down to the edge of the stream. They each nosed the water, took a drink and then looked longingly across the stream. It was very clear that they wanted to cross, but they were afraid.

We were all amused to see how intently Shep watched these new creatures which he had never seen before. First he looked at the lambs. Then he looked at his master, and then very seriously he looked at the water.

Suddenly Shep ran down to the side of the bank of the stream, got on the down side of the lambs and gently moved them on to a place where they could safely cross. He acted like a businesslike as if he had been a sheep for ten years, and we silent in admiration of his work.

"Look," said Bobby, "look at Shep. He's got over safely. He just knew the right place for them to cross."

She came running back to Mr. Joyce as if nothing had happened.

FOR Acid Stomach

PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

BETTER THAN SODA

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this sourling waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

TRY A 25c BOTTLE

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any druggistore.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland

SOMEHOW, even the most indifferent or indignant divorcee can't help feeling sort of "related" to her ex-husband.

A man loves his wife only so long as she is lovable, but a woman is supposed to go on automatically loving her husband, until the judge tells her to stop.

Funny, you can get a minister for a few dollars, a whole church for nothing, and half a dozen bridesmaids for the asking—yet, many a beautiful wedding has been lost to the world, just for lack of one amateur man to stand beside a girl and look pleasant for a few moments.

A determined woman may succeed in keeping a man's nose to the grindstone—but even then she can't always make his eyes behave.

When a girl refuses to let a man kiss her these days, he is not disconcerted; he is merely astonished that she should show so much self control in the face of such a glorious opportunity.

The only trouble with the "younger generation" is that the older generation has filled it with unwarranted optimism by taking it so darn seriously!

The girl with "sex-appeal" may be able to get almost any man on her list, but it's the woman with emotional appeal who gets his name on a marriage certificate.

During the courtship a man loves to analyze his emotions, but after marriage you are supposed to discover his sentimental temperature, and the fluctuations of his heart, by clairvoyance.

Love and poker are two games in which the winning depends more on luck, bluff and a cool head, than on skill and intelligence.

London chorus men threatened to join the general strike.

That makes it unanimous.—Boston Transcript.

Since British mine owners seemed determined to reduce the pay of coal miners from $11 to $8.80 a week it is time for the sociologists to present ideal budgets.

The following suggestions are offered:

	Per Week
Birdseed, bread, fruits	$00.08
Lunch (no time off for lunch)	00.00
A bean (for dinner)	00.01
*Laundry	00.00
*Neck and ear soap	4.85

*Note—It is suggested that instead of wearing shoes, the miners work in their stocking feet. Miners habitually go without socks. This reduces the cost of pedal accessories to $00.00 per speck and year.

The above figures show that the average miner, if single, can get along on $4.95 a week.

If married the overhead goes up $00.13 per week (which is the estimated cost of cosmetics for a single adult female, presuming she goes without cosmetics on week days.)

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE—Who wants to know?

CHAPTER XI.

Let us leave Evelyn, for the nonce, fast asleep on the doorsill of J. Hashaway Sedilts' palatial apartment.

In a cottage on the bluff, overlooking New Hampshire's pebble-ribbed coast, a lamp burns in the window.

An old man, whose hands are studded with laborer's warty jewels, sits rocking a baby—too and fro, too and fro, too and fro, too and fro—or rather, to and fro.

Outside, in the meadow, birds call to their young. Now and again can be heard the melancholy low of the kine. Or the peaceful silence is broken by the murmurings of chicks parked in coupes along the roadside.

The old man is Cal Rinsewater—or Honest Cal, as he was known at the luncheon clubs.

Old man Rinsewater's heart ached. His was dreaming of the days when Nell came tripping through the fields—Nell—where was she now? Was it true she had changed her name to Evelyn, as that drummer told the boys at the strawberry festival?

"I wonder," chuckled Cal Rinsewater, hysterically.

Just then the door opened, and in walked—

WHAT THEY'RE DOING AT WBZ

Boston fans have recently noticed that WBZ is coming in very close to WEEI on their dials, and that his signals are a lot stronger than ever before.

What has actually happened is that WBZA, the "booster" station located on the Hotel Brunswick, has increased its wavelength from 242 meters to 333 meters—exactly the same as the wave used at the Springfield station.

This was attempted once before, but the idea had to be given up on, account of synchronizing difficulties. This time, however, both stations are being "controlled" by one Piezo-electric crystal, a device which automatically stabilizes the wavelength of a transmitter.

This operation at WBZ is still somewhat experimental, but if the scheme bears up under the tests it is now receiving it will quite likely be the means of solving our interference problem. A very effective application of the idea would be to have all the "chain" stations operating with WEAF, work on the same wavelength and controlled by one crystal located at New York.

And last but not least—if you are encountering interference between WBZ and WEEI, just remember that theoretically it is POSSIBLE to separate them. Your receiver may already be sharp enough to do it. If it isn't, your best scheme will be to shorten your aerial and place a .00025 M.F. fixed condenser between it and your set.

Joyce Threatened Carroll, Witnesses Say

"T. R.'S" KINSWOMAN ELOPES

Mrs. James Lee, who, until her secret marriage in Baltimore, after eloping from Washington, was Miss Lilie Roosevelt, a daughter of Robert B. Roosevelt, cousin of the former President. The marriage came as a big surprise to the Boston and Washington friends of the Roosevelts and the James S. Lees of No. 1 Otis place.

TWENTY INJURED AS TRAINS CRASH

Pittsburg, Kan., May 26.—Twenty persons were injured when two Kansas City Southern passenger trains met head-on at Acorn, Ark., today. The engine of one train turned over and the mail car on that train telescooped the baggage car. On the other train the baggage car telescooped the mail car.

It Was Real Champagne Truth From Henry Ford Better Than Cocaine Some Read Books

By Arthur Brisbane

THE famous champagne bath case in New York drags on. Miss Joyce Hawley, lady in the tub, admitted to the court yesterday THAT SHE WAS IN THE TUB, HAD TAKEN THREE OR FOUR DRINKS OF THE CHAMPAGNE IN THE TUB AS SHE BATHED IN IT; ALSO SOME DRINKS FROM OTHER sources. "It got me drunk," the lady, weeping, told the court. And then she sprained her ankle trying to run away, and she had not been paid the $700 "promised her for the stunt." On the whole, the party was a failure, in her opinion.

THE CURIOUS thing is that the man responsible is prosecuted for perjury and for violating the prohibition law. Nobody says anything about his bribing a woman to disgrace and degrade herself and violate the laws of decency.

No wonder Lady Cathcart, accused of "moral turpitude" and released from Ellis Island in time to attend that party, says we Americans should not throw stones.

HENRY FORD says, concerning the Muscle Shoals power plan: "A series of victories by the power combine over agriculture and the national defence, constitute the history to date of that great government war and peace enterprise."

And every word of that is true.

"FIRST," says Henry Ford, the power gentlemen said, "Scrap the Muscle Shoals plant." Then (after Ford offered one hundred million dollars for it, promising to give the farmers

80 CHORUS GIRLS RUSH 'TUB' TRIAL

New York, May 26 (I.N.S.).—A Broadway atmosphere was added today to the "wine bath" trial of Earl Carroll, theatrical producer, charged with perjury, when Augustus Thomas, playwright, and Al Jolson, comedian, were summoned as defense witnesses while 80 pretty young chorus girls from Carroll's musical revue rooted silently from a front-row bench for their employer.

The treasurer and assistant treasurer of Carroll's theatre testified they had heard Miss Hawley threaten to give adverse grand jury testimony unless she was paid for her bathtub "stunt." One witness said she had demanded $1,000 to "say anything" Carroll asked.

Thomas testified he was not a guest at the midnight-to-morn party given by Carroll at which it is alleged Miss Hawley, beautiful 17-year-old show girl, bathed a la nude in a bathtub of champagne.

The playwright said he did known

ROOSEVELT GIRL IS ELOPER

Boston and Washington society circles were surprised today by the announcement of the secret marriage of James Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Lee of No. 1 Otis place, Boston, and Miss Lilie Roosevelt, Washington debutante.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Roosevelt of California street northwest, Washington, and her father is a cousin of the late Theodore Roosevelt.

Announcement of the marriage, which took place in Baltimore on Monday, was made today in Washington by Mrs. Roosevelt.

A telegram from Baltimore from young Lee informed his father of the wedding. Mr. Lee said today the news was a distinct surprise to him, although his son had often mentioned Miss Roosevelt in his letters.

The romance began in Washington during the Winter. According to the father, Lee went to the capital then to take examinions for the State Department. He met Miss Roosevelt, one of the most prominent of Washington's debutantes.

"I had no idea the marriage was contemplated," the father said. "I know my son wasn't making enough money to get married."

According to dispatches, the marriage was as much of a surprise in the capital city as it was here.

KIDNAPED? ONLY BY HER FEET!

TINY "TRILBIES" MAKE A GYPSY OUT OF HER

When Lucy Smith, all of 3, went a-venturing, she stirred up all of Somerville in an awful stew. Police flew about frantically and lots of other folks got all excited, for it was noised around that Lucy had been kid naped by the gypsies. But Lucy had been on a gypsying expedition herself. She had been found by Mary Verania, 10, in inset, and taken to Mary's home, where she slept much of 12 hours while police hunted her. Here she is back home in Buckingham street, Somerville, again.

M'CORMICK HIDING AFTER 'YOUTH' TESTS

Harold F. McCormick, Chicago harvester millionaire, whose vital organs were studied by Boston experts at a local hospital because, it is said, of the failure of transplantation of glands to have the hoped-for lasting effects, was in mysterious retirement today.

He was simultaneously reported to have left his sister-in-law's home, No. 393 Commonwealth avenue, to be enroute to Chicago and to be resting at an estate in Marion on Buzzard's Bay.

Mrs. Stanley McCormick, his sister-in-law, had reported he would go to Chicago after a short rest, and would then probably rejoin his wife, Oanna Walska, the former opera singer, in Paris. It is the estate of the Wirt Dexters, parents of Mrs. Stanley McCormick, that the millionaire was later reported heading for in Marion.

DOCTORS INTERESTED.

Boston doctors expressed themselves as keenly interested at learning that McCormick was under observation for several days at Evans Memorial of the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital. It was generally accepted as a fact that the reason for his visit was the failure of the introduction of the glands of a robust young man into the millionaire to forestall the usual signs of approaching old age.

Failure of the operation for revitalization to have the lasting effects hoped for should have been expected, according to Dr. Andreas F. Christian, Back Bay physician.

SHAW FLAYED KIN, SHE SAYS

Prediction that the Lighthipes "will try to skin me even after I am dead," was made by Charles N. Shaw, sandy king, it was testified in the Shaw will contest today by Miss Mary Penney, a Portland, Me., masseur for sixteen years.

Miss Penney declared that she massaged Shaw twice a week for three months, to help him reduce a swelling in his legs and for the exercise.

Frankly, however, she testified that he seemed to be worse after such treatment.

It was during the massage treatments that Shaw, the witness said, spoke of Mrs. Effie Lighthipe, who now seeks to break his will, as his only living relative and declared.

BOYS ADMIT 30 BREAKS, GOT $30,000 IN LOOT

New York, May 26 (I.N.S.).—Five Brooklyn youths, captured in a cellar today by police, confessed to thirty burglaries which yielded between $30,000 and $50,000 in loot.

The youths held are Edward Taber, Peter Drumgoold, Frank Hurley, each eighteen; George O'Brien, twenty, and Stephen McCann, twenty-one.

SLAYER GAVE WARNING THAT HE WOULD KILL NEW BEDFORD GIRL

New Bedford, May 26 (A.P.).—Carrying out a threat to kill the 12-year-old daughter of his landlord if she didn't run away with him, Paul Turek, 37, today sent a bullet through the brain of Sophie Turek as she lay in bed with her seven-year-old sister.

Turek then ran from the Turek farmhouse on the Old Fall River road in North Dartmouth, leaped over a stone wall into a field and took his own life with a shot from the same revolver.

Turek, a boarder at the Turek farm, was no relation to his victim.

Last Friday Turek attacked Sophie, her father, Joseph Turek, declared today. That incident resulted in Paul being ordered from the house.

Sunday he sent a letter to Sophie's father informing him that he would not leave unless the girl accompanied him. If she refused, the letter said, Paul would kill her.

About 5:30 a. m. Paul returned, ostensibly for his clothing. He found Sophie and her younger sister, Ellen, alone in the house. Ellen's only recollection of what followed is a flash, a revolver shot and the discovery of the mortal wound in her sister's head.

RUNAWAY OF 3 IS HOME AFTER FRANTIC SEARCH

Two sleep-fogged eyes of blue looked through a tangle of flaxen hair early today at a big policeman standing beside the bed in which the owner of the sleepy eyes lay, curled up.

Little Lucy Smith, three-year-old pet of Buckingham street, Somerville, had been found—officially—and she wasn't kidnaped at all, by gypsies or anybody else.

Lucy, who lives at No. 2 Buckingham street, had wandered away from the eyebrow plazas of her home where she had been playing with her baby brother and her dog.

But while Lucy lay sleeping in the home of Mrs. Mary Verania at No. 737 Somerville avenue, Somerville, the police of Massachusetts cities and towns, heeding frantic appeals of little Lucy's parents, were hunting a band of gypsies who recently moved camp from Somerville and who at first were believed to have kidnaped the little girl for her beauty.

RADIO USED IN SEARCH.

Even the radio was used in the attempt to locate Lucy, her description being broadcast from several stations. And while the description was going through the air, Lucy was fast asleep in the safety of a neighbor's home.

A few hours after Lucy was missed, ten-year-old Mary Verania sighted the tot wandering in Somerville avenue. Somerville, the police

BAPTIST IMMERSION AMENDMENT TABLED

Washington, May 26 (A.P.).—The North Regular Church Convention today voted to table an amendment to the church by-laws requiring immersion as a prerequisite to membership in the church.

Moderates and those favoring compromise of the fundamentalist-modernist controversy supported the motion to table the amendment. It would have defined a Baptist church as one composed only of those who had been immersed. Dr. J. W. Brougher of California, immediately after its adoption, introduced a compromise prepared in the hope of reconciling differences in the denomination. He described it as leaving the definition of what constitutes a Baptist church to the local association of churches and at the same time disavowing the principle of open membership and not allowing unimmersed persons to be recognized as convention delegates.

SENATE SPEEDS NEW RUM ORDER INQUIRY

Washington, May 26.—The controversy raging over President Coolidge's order, authorizing extension of Federal authority to State, county and city police officers working on prohibition cases, had advanced today to the point where its legality will be immediately investigated by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

In addition, unless it is revoked within a few days, Representative Hill, Republican, Maryland, wet leader in the House, plans to call up his resolution, introduced yesterday, to prohibit employment of Federal officers by States or of State officers by the Federal government.

TO PROBE LEGAL STATUS.

The Senate inquiry, to be conducted under a resolution by Senator King, Democrat, Utah, will have as

"Good-By, Boys, I Will Make a Place in Heaven"

Does Hanging Discourage Murder? NO

The State of Nevada has adopted a new "kind" way of killing its murderers, and tried it on one of them last Friday. A so-called "lethal chamber" to be filled with deadly gas contains one very heavy chair, no other furniture. There are no windows, only an air-tight door, and an air-tight "peep hole," through which officials and relatives may look at the dying man.

He is strapped into the new fangled "death chair," and is allowed, as they push him through the door, and tie him to the chair, to say his last words.

Then the door is shut. Those scientifically inclined, public officials, relatives of the dying man, look through the peep hole. Hydrocyanic gas is turned on. In a few seconds or minutes the man is dead.

Somebody invented that new way of disgracing science, by making scientific knowledge into a hangman.

And now they use it.

The first man to die in that chamber was a Chinese. And before they tried it on the Chinese they tried it on a cat to make sure that it will kill.

Last Friday they killed a gigantic Serbian, nearly six and a half feet high, named Stanko Judich. And before they choked him to death with the suffocating gas, they put in two little kittens that had never killed anybody, and tried it out on them. They rolled over and died in a few seconds.

The point that we wish to make for our readers is this.

THOSE IN FAVOR OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT SAY IT FRIGHTENS THE CRIMINAL AND DISCOURAGES MURDER.

The execution of Judich on Friday proves that it does nothing of the kind.

As they pushed him through the door of the death room, he was laughing and joking with his guards. And when they tied him in the chair and left him to his death, passing out through the air-tight door, he shouted after them with another laugh, "Good-by, boys, I'll make a place in heaven for you."

Does that sound like a man frightened by death? Doesn't the fact that the State MURDERS THE MURDERER give to the condemned man a feeling of bravado, of mock heroism?

Add to that the stupid fuss that some women make over condemned murderers, sending them flowers, and instead of a death penalty that fills the killer with awe, and holds his hand from crime, you have what to many murderers seem a romantic adventure, a chance to prove their "gameness."

"GOOD-BY, BOYS, I WILL MAKE A PLACE IN HEAVEN FOR YOU," is not the farewell message of a man who has been impressed by the death penalty.

At another kind of punishment that Serbian giant Judich might NOT have laughed. A life of hard work in which to expiate his crime, and to spend years of useful labor, for others, NOT FOR HIMSELF, well-guarded in the prison with walls, or on an island with wide water around it—that would frighten more than "lethal gas."

A prospect of that kind would not have made the tall murderer laugh or brag. It would be too slow, too permanent.

The worst of capital punishment is that it SETS THE BAD EXAMPLE.

A man kills in anger or deliberately plans a murder because HE hates someone.

A great State, representing the people's justice, then says, through the mouth of the judge, "WE hate YOU, so we are going to KILL you. We are going to do to you, whom we hate, EXACTLY WHAT YOU DID TO THE PERSON YOU HATED."

Why shouldn't the murderer say to himself, "I am all right, my judgment is SOUND. What I HATE I KILL. For doing it, the State hates and kills ME. I am only following the example set from above."

There was a time when the State tortured men before executing them. Ravaillac, who killed Henry the Fourth, was tortured in a way so horrible that it could not be described in this column without making women that read it sick and faint.

All the devilish ingenuity of the executioners and torturers was exhausted before his life at last was ended.

And when he was dead, fragments of his body were actually cooked and eaten in different parts of Paris, and that was considered a great joke.

The dregs of the people then like their government were barbarous, all over the world.

Capital punishment as we practice it, with our gallows, our electric chair, our lethal chamber, is not as bad as the old method of torture first and death afterward.

But it is bad ENOUGH. It also proves that people are still barbarous.

IT ALLOWS GOVERNMENT TO SET THE EXAMPLE OF KILLING.

Instead of diminishing the number of murderers, it increases them. The murderer can say to himself, "If they CATCH me they will kill me. I am betting my life against the life that I take. THAT'S FAIR."

Take the same murderer and say to him, "You are a murderer, but the justice under which you live is NOT a murderer.

"You have killed, we shall not kill you, but we shall give you long years in which to repent your killing.

"Possibly we shall reform that quality within you that made the killing possible. In any case, we shall make the rest of your life useful to OTHERS, and thus enable you really to atone for having taken the life of one."

Capital punishment is out of date, it disgraces justice, does not prevent murder, on the contrary increases the number of killings.

Capital punishment should be abolished.

HUMANITY RESPONDS TO THE IDEAL

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THIS year I witnessed about as marvelous a spectacle as I have ever seen. It was the Easter morning service on the top of Mount Rubidoux, at Riverside, California.

If you were to ask five or ten thousand people to get up at half-past three in the morning, and a lot of boy scouts and policemen to volunteer their services at sunrise, and expect those people to climb a mountain a thousand feet high, and have them respond favorably, I should call that a miracle. The sheer physical discomfort is almost insurmountable.

We are always making things easy for people to come to church. We select the right time of day. We have beautiful music to which they may listen. We have stained-glass effects to please the eye. We have soft pews. And all that sort of thing. Yet our churches are empty.

Here you have to get up at an ungodly hour in the morning, climb a good-sized mountain, go without your breakfast, and yet the top of the mountain is crowded.

If we held our church services in some place hard to get to, on the top of a mountain that people had to climb, or at the end of a winding passage, so that it took enormous effort to reach it, perhaps more people would come.

There is something in human nature that responds to the call of adventure that is piqued by the effort necessary to accomplish a thing.

Then there are the crowds. Crowds draw crowds. Man is a gregarious animal, and the psychological magnetism in a crowd is undeniable. People have got into the way of going to these exercises and they persist in going. The only way you could get more people to them now would be to pass a law prohibiting them. Then everybody would go.

And they go to this point apparently not to get something to eat, not to get money, or any other tangible reward, but merely to get a thrill. This old humanity of ours sometimes think is very coarse and material, yet it responds strangely to the ideal. You never realize it until you see five thousand people up here at break of day singing "In the Cross of Christ I Glory" and repeating the Lord's Prayer.

There is nothing particularly attractive or unusual in the service. It is about the same sort of thing that you will find in any church. Somehow it is the occasion, the environment, the unusual nature of the event that appeal to the people.

As I looked out over the assembled multitude at this sunrise service, I saw what were apparently the same dull and ordinary faces of the crowd. Yet there was a spark behind each one of these faces. There was something that thrilled to the appeal of the spiritual.

It is also amazing to see how everybody enjoyed being of some service. The boy scouts that were everywhere lining the road and on duty had been up all night. Hard policemen were standing about on duty. Everyone of them felt the importance of serving his fellow men. There is something about being of use to the world that finds a response in all of us.

Then the service. It was Protestant and Catholic. It was not any new-fangled religion, but an outgrowth of the religions the world has enjoyed. So when the new religion comes in which we shall all share it will not be yours or mine, but a development of the religion of us all. It will be a growth, the natural flower from a vine which has long been planted.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

THE human race has, in its known history, devised many emphatic ways of disposing of those who are traitors to their country.

We've shot them at sunrise—

We've cut our their tongues and squeezed their toenails—

Or fed them to large peevish lions—

But there's another type of traitor which has precipitated a million times more tragedy than all the political turncoats that ever were hatched.

Yet, up to date, she's sitting pretty, and collecting large gobs of sympathy from the public at large.

Of all the despicable brands of Mrs. Judas, she's the worst.

Time was when that woman stood up before the world and promised to take her man for better or worse, through sickness or health, till death did them part. On that day she took not only his love and his property for her own, but his honor also became hers.

She did not promise that she would be blind to his faults and weaknesses, nor did she agree to endure ignominy or sacrifice her own high standards.

But she did agree to be his loyal and loving partner, fighting by his side against all common enemies. If slander or suspicion threatened him, she assumed the wifely responsibility of helping him to defend himself against that slander and suspicion. There, on that day, she told the world that her love would guard this man's interests, that her pride would be a wall about him and her loyalty an army in his defense.

Easily Broken

This is what the simplest marriage ceremony means. That is the covenant that lies behind all marriages, Christian or pagan. That is what the stupidest woman understands when she says "I will."

But how do thousands of wives keep that promise?

They do not keep it at all. They daily betray their husbands.

No, I'm not insinuating that these ladies have lovers. The disloyalty which involves a lover is only one kind of betrayal. There are scores of other kinds of betrayals which are just as fatal to the happiness of the home.

The wife who whines over the back fence to her neighbor about her husband's bad temper—

The wife who complains to the Ladies' Aid Society about her husband's stinginess—

The wife who whispers salacious confidences over the bridge table concerning her husband's love making—

The wife who teaches her children to fib to their father and who organizes them into a hostile union against his authority—

The wife who runs blubbering home to mama at each petty vexation—

The telephone wife who spills the domestic dirt for a solid hour each morning.

All these wives are as truly traitors as the miserable little sneak who meets her Gentleman Friend at furtive corners.

They're Mrs. Judasses, every one of them.

Poisons Mind

Our contemporary literature is all gummed up with articles on Why Marriage Is a Failure. No such elaborate analysis is needed to answer that question. Three-quarters of our marriages are a failure because wives talk about their husbands.

Each word of such conversations begets doubt and contempt not only in the mind of the audience, but also in the mind of the speaker. Such a wife sells out her husband not only to the world, but to herself. Her peevish thought swells into vicious determination when given voice. And there are always scores of busybodies who are ready to help it swell.

'You Said It, Marceline'

On "A STRENUOUS GAME"

LOVE, some say, is
A GAME. Well, if it IS
It is PRETTY
STRENUOUS, and
When they START whether
They are playing for
KEEPS or FORGET-
ME-NOTS. Yes, VERY few
Seem to know WHAT
It is ALL ABOUT, and
Whether Love is a
Fight, a FOOTBALL MATCH,
Bout or JUST EXERCISE.
Not that it would
Make MUCH difference
To many, if they DID
Know; for SOME people
Remain AMATEURS at
Love till they DIE, and
Not ALL the professionals
Are—GENTLEMEN.
What makes it DIFFICULT
Is that A MAN never
Seems to know when
The game STARTS, and
A WOMAN never knows
When it ENDS.
It is a FREE FIGHT
WITH NO UMPIRE.

"Millions in It"

Foreign Market for New England

Thirty years ago, variety performers who specialized in "imitations" never even thought of closing their act without giving us a little of John T. Raymond (born O'Brien), as "Col. Mulberry Sellers" in the Twain-Warner play, "The Gilded Age."

"Col. Sellers" was a visionary speculator, always about to promote something with "millions in it." One of his get-ups was an almost miraculous eye-wash, which he was going to sell in Africa. "There are 40,000,000 people in Africa, and they've ALL got sore eyes! . . . . There's millions in it!"

The difference between the Mark Twain character and the gentlemen who have called the New England Foreign Trade Conference, which opens tomorrow at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, or one of the differences, is that whereas "Col. Sellers" was a visionary, these are men of vision. Every man and every woman in New England who manufactures something which MIGHT be sold abroad, which COULD be sold abroad, which SHOULD be sold abroad, should grasp at the opportunity to hear EXPERTS discuss "Export Elementals," "Packing and Transportation," "Credits and Finance," "Sales Promotion" and "Imports."

Nine Government experts, attaches of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, will give New England the benefit of their observation and experience. At their head is Dr. Julius Klein, professor of Latin-American history and economics at Harvard when Secretary Hoover, a few years since, induced him to go to Washington. Dr. Klein is a brilliant young man, an unusual young man. By all means hear HIM, at Thursday's luncheon, on "What Are the OBSTACLES to Our Foreign Trade?"

And ARE there "millions" in this export business, for New England? The figures show that last year it amounted to $181,820,493, EACH of the six States showing a GAIN over its figure for 1924. Maine's foreign business was "up" $600,000, New Hampshire's $1,142,403, Vermont's $1,762,659, or SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT!

Massachusetts, last year, increased its merchandise exports by more than $4,000,000; Rhode Island by $2,248,069; Connecticut by $4,489,697.

It has not been true always, but it IS true today, that the United States maintains the BEST system of commercial intelligence of any country in the world. Information as to business and other conditions in any spot on earth may be obtained from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, as a rule, within twenty-four hours.

Intelligent manufacturers will be present at every session of the conference tomorrow and on Thursday and will thank the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the New England Export Club for the opportunity.

ILL LUCK DOESN'T PROVE MAN TO BE FAILURE

Don't judge a person's success by the clothes he wears.

If a man seems continually hard-pressed financially and looks a bit shabby don't conclude that he is a failure till you know something of what his discouragements are and learn his problems.

Some men have one set-back after another, so thick and fast that it is impossible to recover from misfortunes.

Suppose you had had one hard knock after another and no time to get your breath financially, you would not be as easy in your monetary harness as you are today.

You, too, may have met with reverses, but you had time to recover.
